

Oregon at the St. Louis Fair.
Over four thousand visitors have signed the register in the Oregon Building at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, and as many more have passed through the structure without registering. The log cabin is cool on the hottest days, and presents a very inviting appearance to tired sight-seers.

Directly across the gravelled road from the Oregon Building is the House of Hoo Hoo, the lumberman's club, which is similar in many respects to the Webfoot house. The lumbermen have spared no expense in making their home attractive, and have installed a very excellent restaurant in their club for furnishing light meals.

Visitors are at once attracted by the two unique buildings, and never fail to take them both in. All day long they crowd the veranda of the Hoo Hoo house, and the main hall of Oregon's building, just for the sake of seeing something original and different from anything else on the grounds.

A large black bearskin adorns one of the walls in Superintendent Wehrung's room, and this never fails to secure the rapt attention of every small boy that enters the building, not to say that of the grown-ups also.

"My, ain't it great," said a little urchin the other day, as he walked up to it, and ran his hands through the hair. "And do they have them in Oregon?"

On being assured that there were really bears in Oregon, the young man was very much interested, and had it not been for his mother, he would have been in the Oregon building yet.

Photographs of Oregon views, Pendleton Indian robes, and a variety of Oregon things also attract great attention from Eastern residents. To some who have travelled over the Coast states, the photographs present familiar views, and they are always gone over with renewed interest.

The building itself, which is intended to be a facsimile of Lewis and Clark's fort on Clatsop Plains is about 100 feet long across the front, with a square yard adjoining on the back. Immediately on entering, the visitor finds himself in a large hall-way, with an immense fireplace on one side. A door at the back opens out into the enclosed yard, while at each end wings project. At one end Col. Henry Dosh of the Lewis & Clark Exposition has a small office in addition to a large ladies' waiting room, while the other wing is occupied by the offices of General Superintendent Wehrung.

The roof is covered with regular old fashioned shakes, split from red cedar and brought all the way from Oregon. On the top there is also a platform used for dedication purposes.

A little grove of trees adds attractiveness to the location and never fails to elicit favorable comment from the crowds of exposition visitors. The cabin is so different from other state buildings that it always pleases people who have grown tired of seeing plain stately mansions.

Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets Better than a Doctor's Prescription.

Mrs. J. W. Turner, of Truhart, Va., says that Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets have done him more good than anything he could get from the doctor. If any physician in this country was able to compound a medicine that would produce such gratifying results in cases of stomach troubles, biliousness or constipation, his whole time would be used in preparing this one medicine. For sale by Lee Beall.

A belated communication from Willow Ranch to the Alturas New Era says that Wm. Lemon and wife have gone to Idaho, where they will make their future home. Also that "Uncle" Billy Cloud was dangerously sick with dropsy, and was not expected to recover.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer one Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
