

AFTER THE VACATION

Busy Season for Doctors, Dentists and Tinkers.

When People Return from Summer's Outing There is Much Demand for Medical Advice and Much Repairing to Be Done.

The end of the vacation season is a busy time for the transportation companies, for the baggagemen and for the apartment house agents. The handy men who do little jobs about a house, from winding a sash cord to cleaning a furnace, the electricians, bell hangers and the plumbers, all find extra work when people return to their homes, which had been closed or placed in the hands of a servant or two for months. But these are not the only people whose work increases with the close of the season—the physician and the dentist come in for their share of extra work, and many of the men in these professions know this and come home from their vacation early enough to be on hand when the wanderers return, says the New York Tribune.

Some people when they go away for the summer, lay in a stock of medicine and advice, and think they have provided against anything that may turn up. If nothing happens, if none of the children become sick, if they manage to avoid accidents and come home whole, the wise parents put themselves on the back and congratulate themselves on having gone away provided with Dr. Curen's medicines and advice. If there is sickness of any kind in the family while the vacation lasts one of the first things that the returning mother does is to send for the family physician. "There is nobody sick," she will tell the doctor when he comes, "but while we were away our William was unwell." Then she'll tell what was the matter with the boy, what medicine he got, what diet was prescribed and all about the cure. "Now, do you think that was all right?" she may say, or, "If there was any typhoid in the water or malaria in the air can we do anything now?" or "Shall we continue the diet prescribed by the country doctor?"

That is only one class of after-vacation patients. Another is made up of people who come to report as to what good or harm has come to them because of the physician's advice to go to the country. These people are not all agreeable visitors at the doctor's office. If when they return to town they are still not free from the hay fever, malaria, rheumatism, nervousness or indigestion, for the cure of which they went to the country or to some watering place, the doctor hears from them. Most patients are reasonable in that respect and understand that an absolute cure was not expected, but others give the doctor a piece of their mind, and vow they will never go to the country again because a physician advises them to do so.

But there is another class of patients at this time of the year which is rather a large one. It is made up of people who went to the country perfectly well and returned worn out and sick. Their vacation is usually a constant "go" and they become tired out, exhausted and complain of being "run down." On the whole physicians miss considerable practice during the vacation months, but it is usually made up right after the people return, and the general practitioner gets a few weeks of heavy business.

An uptown photographer said that he had stranger after-vacation clients than his neighbor the physician. "People who go to the country and invest a lot of money in fresh air and exercise," he said, "are proud when one tells them that they look well when they get back home. Some of them are anxious to preserve the evidence of their summer gain, and I have had them come here, fresh from the country, and ask to be photographed and 'wonder' if there was no way to show their 'fine tan.'"

PRAYERS FOR A STIPEND.

French Abbe Who Has Made a Town Prosperous by a Novel Trade.

There is a small village in the department of the Sarthe, in France, that has arisen from poverty to affluence by means of prayer furnished on demand for a consideration. The cure of the village, a certain Abbe Buguet, was as poor as his flock. But he was not content to stay that way and, being a man of imagination, he looked around for some means by which he could better the condition of his people and incidentally his own. He finally hit upon an idea, says a London exchange. He learned to set type, bought a secondhand hand press and set up, printed and published a leaflet in which he discoursed upon the efficacy of prayer. Then he made a business proposition to his flock. He would pray for them, for their children and for their dead for an annual subscription of one sou. In other words, he would take charge of all their prayers for one sou a year. The idea appealed to his parishioners, and all of them subscribed. With the little sums thus acquired he printed more leaflets and distributed them throughout the neighboring country and every leaflet seemed to bring in a new subscriber.

To-day he has many thousands of subscribers who live in all parts of the world, and Montilgeon, which was once little more than a collection of hovels, is a prosperous town. It has a church that is a cathedral. It has wide streets lighted by electric lights, a post office, waterworks and cab service. And in the center of the town is a large white building where Abbe Buguet, with eight almoners, 15 interpreters, 20 secretaries and a crowd of clerks, proceeds with his work of supplying prayers. More than 1,500 letters come each day, each of them containing at least the required sou, and most of them having a much larger sum. A part of these letters ask for prayers and these are divided among various needy priests in the neighborhood, who thus are able to add considerable to their meager incomes. All the voluntary offerings go into the general treasury and are used for the benefit of the town and the valley in which it is situated. The mayor of the town is the cashier and the principal councilors are the secretaries or chief accountants and Abbe Buguet is manager of all. It is the most profitable prayer factory in the world.

One Lady's Recommendation Sold Fifty Boxes of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets.

I have, I believe, sold fifty boxes of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets on the recommendation of one lady here, who bought a box of them about a year ago. She never tires of telling her neighbors and friends about the good qualities of these tablets. P. M. Stone, Druggist, Rochester, Ind. The pleasant purgative effect of the tablets makes them a favorite with ladies everywhere. For Sale by Lee Beall.

The broom must go! A French hygiene journal states that in Tunis the mortality from tuberculosis is 11.3 per 1,000 among the Arabs, and only 0.75 per 1,000 among the Jews, who lead pretty much the same life as the Arabs, except that they daily clean all their furniture with moist cloths, and never stir up the germinifed dust with brooms.

The skunk first appears in history in the year 1636, when he was described in Theodot's History of Canada. He had been a long time on the earth before that time, however, for there are species of fossil skunks. The skunks of the genus Chinea range over the greater part of North America and as far south as Mexico. Other skunks are found in Central and South America.

Brutally Tortured.

A case came to light that for ferocious and unmerciful torture has perhaps never been equalled. Joe Colby, of Colusa, Calif., writes: "For 35 years I endured insufferable pain from Rheumatism and nothing relieved me, though I tried everything known. I came across Electric Bitters and it was the greatest medicine on earth for my trouble. A few bottles of it completely relieved and cured me." Just as good for Liver and Kidney troubles and general debility. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by Lee Beall, Druggist.

SEEKS LONG MISSING MOTHER.

Rich Manufacturer of Leadville, Col., Starts Search at the Old Home at Kenosha, Wis.

Earl C. Brown, a prominent manufacturer of Leadville, Col., is in Kenosha, Wis., on a strange mission, and one which has brought to light a peculiar story of other days in Kenosha. Brown is at Kenosha for the purpose of making an effort to find some trace of his mother, Mrs. James Brown, who disappeared from Kenosha under mysterious circumstances more than 28 years ago. All the facts in connection with the story cannot be discovered. "The widow Brown," as the mother of the Leadville man was known in Kenosha, had resided on Ashland avenue for many years. One day it was noticed that the blinds in the little cottage were closed, and as the days went by people began to wonder as to the cause. Finally, on going to the house, they discovered it was empty. The widow Brown was not to be found anywhere. Her best dresses were folded neatly on the bed, and everything was neat and clean, but nothing had been left to show where or in what manner the widow had left her home.

There seems to be reason to believe that Mrs. Brown met with foul play somewhere, and it is possible that she was murdered in her home and her body secreted; but the little house remained closed for so many weeks before strange hands took control that a criminal would have had plenty of time to cover his crime. Many of the earlier inhabitants of the city recall the disappearance of Mrs. Brown, but none of them are able to throw any light on the question.

Night Was Her Terror.

"I would cough nearly all night long," writes Mrs. Chas. Applegate, of Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. I had consumption so bad that if I walked a block I would cough frantically and spit blood, but when all other medicine failed three $1.00 bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery wholly cured me and I gained 58 pounds." It's absolutely guaranteed to cure Coughs and Colds, LaGrippe, Bronchitis and all Throat and Lung Troubles. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Beall's at Drug Store.

An Interesting Autograph.

Among the interesting things on view with the collection of books by negro authors at Buffalo is an autograph of Webster, dated March 19, 1847: "I have paid $120 for the freedom of Paul Jennings. He agrees to work out the same at eight dollars a month, to be found with board, clothes and washing, to begin when we return south. His freedom papers I give him. They are recorded in this district." This Jennings was the son of one of President Madison's slaves, his father being an Englishman of family. He became a body servant of Madison, and afterward wrote "A Colored Man's Reminiscences of President Madison."

Safeguard the Children.

Notwithstanding all that is done by means of health and charitably inclined persons, the death rate among small children is very high during the hot weather of the summer months in the large cities. There is not probably one case of bowel complaint in a hundred, however, that could not be cured by the timely use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by Lee Beall.
