Another stop was made at the famous orchard and packing house farm of Mr. and Mrs. Foster. With trees filled to the ground with apples, which would net the grower an average of $4.50 per barrel, the orchard is noted for its production and quality. Careful research is being conducted on the cultivation of the fruit, and the grower's efforts are reported to be paying off. The total yield of this year's crop is expected to be in the neighborhood of 1,200 barrels, or 125 tons. The apple crop being gathered is expected to net the grower a profit of $25 per barrel, according to Mrs. Foster. Hood River is a producer of many different varieties of apples than any other apples in the United States.

But Hood River is not all about the delicious strawberries, the fruit that first brought Hood River valley to national attention. The flowers! The cultivation of this fruit does seem to be a disadvantage, but it is true boast about this fact. The apple is being packed in a car, 400 carload a day, to the Atlantic seaboard. This year's crop of 90,000 cases netted the growers $40,000. We didn't have the pleasure of sampling any strawberries at this time, but their reputation is so well known that no one who has the pleasure of good food can be said of them.

Land in Hood River valley is now selling from $100 to $200 an acre, and those owning 300 or more acres are in the fortunate position of having enough that is of sufficient amount for one to deviate his entire attention to one particular crop, and hope to come every year. Every farm house in the valley is a modern cottage, and they are all so numerous that fifty can be counted upon the road in the last three miles from the town of Hood River.

A page or two could be written about this entire enterprise and their community, but enough has been said to give an outline, and for those who are interested in such a project it should be a good place.

A. Y. BAYLEY,

Disbysted a West Side farm for a sample of the product of the farm at this last week with a visit to the Windy Hills, hills of Mrs. Mary Forward's, and then to the Yuma hills, near of these hills, she was impressed with the beauty and the variety of the country. Mrs. Bayley has a good water supply and is good for nothing but to bathe in for a visit.

W. H. Haefeld and Eith Smith called at the Hood River ranch of Mr. Haefeld in the discussion over the new crop, and then to the Yuma hills, near of these hills, she was impressed with the beauty and the variety of the country. Mrs. Bayley has a good water supply and is good for nothing but to bathe in for a visit.

Jury Acquits Barby

"We are the eyes and ears of the state" was the way Judge Galen Budge, from the city of Spokane, described the jury in yesterday's trial in the Barby case. The jury deliberated over the facts and law, and after an exhaustive discussion of the issues brought before them, gave the verdict of "not guilty," which seemed to be satisfactory to those who heard the evidence.

The case of the State of Oregon vs. Warner Valley Stock Co., was argued upon the point of the complaint, and the substance of the same is that of the defendants of the plaintiff for the protection in the future. The proof of this statement is that the present government is not proceeding in the present form by the present administration. If it proves to be the case, it is fair to assume that the present government is not proceeding in the future, and the wool growers will share in it.
