Caught a Cat-Fish.

Last week J. B. Blair brought eight cat-fish down from the Chewaucan river, where this specie of fish abounds, and left them at Beal's drug store, where Mr. Beal kept them on exhibit for several days in a sink. Lee gave six of them to Mart Hopkins who put them in the slough near his ranch on the marsh. While the fish were in the sink at the drug store one of Mr. Arner's little boys came in and wanted one. Lee told the boy to catch one and take it home. The little fellow was overjoyed at the prospect of such easy fishing and made for the cat-fish with bare hands, but met with much difficulty. Every time he would grab for one the fish would burn him, but the boy was diligent and finally came out victorious, with bloody hands and a catfish.

Mr. Beal was not aware of what a life-and-death struggle was going on, or he would have ended the bloody battle.
