Hobart, the son of F. M. Milles, while playing with powder last Saturday, had his face severely burned. A number of children were playing, celebrating of course, and had removed the powder from some cartridges, and were setting fire to the powder. Hobart failed on one occasion to get far enough away when the powder exploded. His face was badly blackened. However, the Dr. was summoned, and said the burns were not deep enough to leave scars.

The Malheur irrigation project looks as though it needed a little liquid sunshine to give it vim at the present time. It has so many ailments that the Government Irrigation Doctors have about given the case up. By the time the Government gets through investigating and surveying the different irrigation projects in Oregon, that $4,500,000 reclamation fund which the Government owes to the state will also need a little liquid sunshine thrown on it in order to see it—and no lands placed under irrigation.—Cline Falls Press.
