Kicked Off the Water Wagon.

The Alturas Plumber stopped over at an inoffensive joke from the Cedarville Record. The Record drives home the Plumber's sarcasm in the following manner.

"Our venerable friend, the Alturas Plumber, was very angry last week. He was mad clear thru and thru. Well, he had cause to be. The Lakeview Examiner had caught the Plumber red handed in the act of handling the truth in a very reckless manner, and had, metaphorically speaking, sat down on it and squashed it all over the earth. It had also just been kicked off the hurrican deck of the water wagon that is billed to leave for Portland next month. That coupled with the warm weather, seemed to weaken 'its' mighty brain and in the delirium following, there appeared to 'its' distorted vision, deep and damning wrongs perpetrated by The Record. 'It' found fault with a harmless little paragraph, meant more for a joke than anything else. Perhaps The Record builded better than it knew in that little joke and it brings to mind the old saying that 'one should not joke on facts.' And 'it' roared us. 'It' said that we were ignorant, and to show 'its' superior intelligence and education, 'it' sandwiched in a couple of antiquated Latin phrases that had about as much bearing on the subject as did the office of Forest Reserve Commissioner to the Ten Commandments. 'It', however, showed us how deficient we were, but on studying the matter over we have about come to the conclusion that it is better to be a fool than a hypocrite. 'It' said that we had an antipathy for Alturas. That is one of those things that caused The Examiner to sit down on the Plumber. We heartily agree with the Plumber in Prof. Ossler's theory. Had it been carried into effect on our neighbor a long suffering public would be spared the periodical outbreaks of 'its' diseased brain."
