The Farra vs. Bevil case was tried out last week in the court in Lakeview, and Mr. Bevil was released from custody. The case was one mentioned in last week's Examiner, arising from a cutting scrape which took place at Paisley a week ago last Sunday.

A gentleman informed us this week that he had received a letter from Mr. Lusk, of the French-Glen Co., in which Mr. Lusk stated that he "guessed he had sold the French-Glen property, but not to a Christian Federation, nor for no such price as was stated in the papers."

The Examiner receives numerous requests for sample copies and we try to keep everybody posted on the resources of the county. This week we have about a dozen letters from people at a distance asking for a "sample copy of The Examiner, as they want to learn something of the country."

G. W. Cooley was in Lakeview last week, summoned here as a witness in the Farra-Bevil case. Geo. said he was in Lakeview as a result of butting in on a row where he had no business. In order to make his trip of some business importance to himself, he took back the liquor license issued to Carrier & Cooley by the special term of court.

J. J. Clark, erstwhile painter, has moved his family back to Lakeview from Royston, Klamath county, where they spent the summer with Mr. Clark, who was employed by Dave Edler, the sheep man. Mr. Clark will make a trip to the railroad with sheep, and then he will come to town and open a paint shop. He is going to advertise, too.

Two men, of the hobo class, were arrested at Bidwell last week and lodged in jail at Alturas for selling whiskey to Indians, which resulted in the death of one Indian a couple of weeks ago. One of the men was given 90 days in the county jail, and the other was charged with selling whiskey to Indians on government Reserve and was held pending the action of the U. S. authorities.
