Watch Us Grow.

Some months ago The Examiner promised its readers something better in a newspaper than they ever had. A twelve-page country newspaper is something very rare. In fact we do not know of another. Our arrangements are not yet complete, but as fast as conditions permit, our promise will be fulfilled. This week we are issuing a twelve-page paper, but owing to our large paper not being on hand we are compelled to issue The Examiner partly six-column and partly five-column. In a few weeks, as soon as our new paper arrives, we will show readers of The Examiner a weekly newspaper equal to any in the United States, a six-column twelve-page paper cut and folded as the city papers are.

For this extra work, which gives the readers so much for their money, we do not ask a cent more than we have been charging for The Examiner; $2.00 a year pays for it all. We expect, however, that our extra efforts to supply the best going, will be rewarded by a much larger subscription list.

The people are getting the benefit of The Examiner's prosperity. Every dollar that comes in, above the actual running expenses, is invested in something new that will allow us to better serve the public. That the Examiner has been prosperous must be seen. Our subscription list has gradually grown till now we are printing more papers every week than any country weekly we know of. Every person who pays two dollars for a year's subscription to The Examiner is not doing it as a charitable act; he or she is going to get full value received for their money. All who want to see a paper build up and keep pace with the world, by advancing a step at every opportunity should subscribe for The Examiner, the paper that never lets an opportunity pass to advance a step. Everybody knows this paper to be a fearless chronicler of the facts just as they are. It does not aim to injure anyone, but will "hue to the line," and if a chip strikes anyone's corn and hurts, we are only sorry that the corn was there; not because we hurt it.

Send in your two dollars, now and get the Examiner for a whole year in its new form, and see what our next step will be.

The Republican love-feast held in Portland on the 12th was a grand affair. Harmony reigned throughout the meeting. Many of the most prominent speakers of the state, among them Senator Fulton, were present and were "de-light-ed" with the result of the reunion and its harmonizing effect on the moving factions in the Republican party.

I propose to offer the public a stopping place where their horses will be fed and cared for as they would be cared for at home.

I will also keep a team and rig to hire.

The Portland Oregonian a few days ago contained a lengthy editorial regarding the removal of the Capital of the State to Portland. The Oregonian simply mentioned the matter and denied that such a move would be hatched in that office. The fact is, so it appears, that the Oregonian is placing the people of the state just to see if they are asleep. That paper would probably find out that somebody was pretty wide awake if it broaches the subject too strongly. Simultaneously with such a move, might come a proposition to divide the state. The editor of the Oregonian feels himself "centrally located."

Portland is a great city, great in a way that mean financial strength. It is one of the strongest cities, financially, according to its size, in the United States. She does an immense business, and principally on her own capital. She is well safe-guarded against financial ruin in case of a money panic, such as have caused banks to fail in many larger cities in the country where a large portion of the business is done with borrowed capital. Her banks are solid, and while banks in other cities may fail, Portland banks will withstand the greatest money panic the country has ever known. This condition exists because of the solidness of Portland's business men who are doing business on the city's own money, and the fact that it has an ample sufficiency to carry it over a considerable chasm. Portland is contented with its condition. If it requires a great outlay of money to change it, it is going to take all that comes its way and not go to sea looking for more; this is characteristic of men doing business on their own hard-earned money.

When this is said it is about all Portland can ever assume the greatness it would like to. It is not, and cannot be the New York of the Pacific Coast. It may be the metropolis of Oregon and the great political magnet of the state, but even in its own bailiwick it cannot reign supreme over all matters.

So far as Lake county is concerned the 60 miles difference in the distance to the state capital would cut but little ice, and no doubt if the scheme was to move the capital 60 miles nearer to us instead of 60 miles farther away, the people on this side of the mountains would view it in the same light. The cost of such a change would be of more importance than the distance to travel to reach the capital from here. We do not believe a proposition to move the capital of the state 60 miles, or one mile in any direction from where it is now would meet with favor in this section of the state.

Talk to us about something of a less selfish motive, Mr. Scott.

Looks Like Spite Work.

Mr. Johnson, the mule buyer who has been in Modoc county several months buying horses and mules, had a little turn in the Alturas court last week. It seems that Mr. Johnson's horses got mixed with John Collin's horses below Alturas, and the two men were trying to separate the horses at Mr. Collins' corrals, when a difficulty arose between the two owners of the animals as to Collins' method of separating, when Collins was made to leave the corral. When the horses were separated

Johnson asked Collins to go into the corral and see if any of his horses had been overlooked, which Collins refused to do. Johnson started his horses for Madeline, and when they were nearly there it was discovered that some of Collins' horses were in the bunch. Mr. Johnson at once started a man back with the horses, and in the mean time Collins went to Alturas and swore out a warrant for Johnson's arrest on a charge of stealing. Justice Henderson, so we understand dismissed the case.
