LAKEVIEW, OREGON, NOV. 2, 1905.

Many newspapers all over the country are publishing articles under the following heading: "Roosevelt Has Won the South." Substantially, this is true, but the impression most likely to be conveyed, that the president's possessions are of recent acquisition, owing entirely to his trip through the Southern states, is a misapprehension.

President E. H. Harriman of the Southern Pacific Co., who started on a record-smashing trip from San Francisco to New York with a special, carrying his family, a few rail road officials and Miss Alice Roosevelt and companions returning from their trip abroad, evidently got cold feet when the special reached a level stretch of track over which it was expected to fly at a 100-mile-an-hour rate to good the mile-a-minute run across the continent.

The latest projected move on the Harriman Southern Pacific system is the construction of a new road starting out from Eugene across the Cascades and swinging south to meet the Weed road projected to Klamath Falls. The road, it is believed by outsiders, will become the main line of the Southern Pacific's Oregon and California line, as the heavy grading over the Siskiyou will be avoided.

Next Tuesday, November 7th, will be city election. The way to vote is just as you please, or not at all, if you prefer; you can confer no great favor upon any man by voting for him for an office with no salary attached and which requires so much time and work.

The State of Oregon has 50,000 acres of base for lieu land. The governor is considering the advisability of accepting bids from cruisers for locating lands outside of reservations on which to use the base, as there is no sale for the base at the present price.

Secretary Hitchcock of the Interior department, has given out the impression that he may recommend to the next congress the abolishment of Receivers of U. S. land offices, as suggested by Commissioner Richards.

Bids are soon to be advertised for, for construction of the canals and other works in the Klamath irrigation project. The bids are to be opened December 20.

Entire Russia has gone on a strike and no chance for a settlement until freedom of speech and freedom of the press is granted.

It has been rumored that Senator Heyburn of Idaho, may be mixed in the Idaho land frauds.

Ex-Senator Jerry Simpson, known as "Sockless Jerry," died last week, after a long illness.

CASTORIA. The Kind You Have Always Bought Bears the Signature of

"Well?" asked Lestrade. Holmes shrugged his shoulders. "We have a long way to go yet," he said. "And yet—and yet—well, we have some suggestive facts to net upon. The possession of this trifling bust was worth more in the eyes of this strange criminal than a human life. That is one point. Then there is the singular fact that he did not break it in the house or immediately outside the house, if to break it was his sole object."

"He was rattled and hustled by meeting the other fellow. He hardly knew what he was doing." "Well, that's likely enough, but I wish to call your attention very particularly to the position of this house in the garden of which the bust was destroyed."

Lestrade looked about him. "It was an empty house, and so he knew that he would not be disturbed in the garden."

"Yes, but there is another empty house farther up the street, which he must have passed before he came to this one. Why did he not break it there, since it is evident that every yard that he carried it increased the risk of some one meeting him?"

"I give it up," said Lestrade. Holmes pointed to the street lamp above our heads.

"He could see what he was doing here, and he could not there. That was his reason."

"By Jove, that's true," said the detective. "Now that I came to think of it, Dr. Barnicot's bust was broken not far from his red lamp. Well, Mr. Holmes, what are we to do with that fact?"

"To remember it—to docket it. We may come on something later which will bear upon it. What steps do you propose to take now, Lestrade?"

"The most practical way of getting at it, in my opinion, is to identify the dead man. There should be no difficulty about that. When we have found who he is and who his associates are we should have a good start in learning what he was doing in Pitt street last night and who it was who met him and killed him on the doorstep of Mr. Horace Harker. Don't you think so?"

"No doubt, and yet it is not quite the way in which I should approach the case."

"What would you do, then?"

"Oh, you must not let me influence you in any way. I suggest that you go on your line and I on mine. We can compare notes afterward, and each will supplement the other."

"Very good," said Lestrade. "If you are going back to Pitt street you might see Mr. Horace Harker. Tell him for me that I have quite made up my mind and that it is certain that a dangerous homicidal lunatic with Napoleonic delusions was in his house last night. It will be useful for his article."

Lestrade started.

"You don't seriously believe that?"

Holmes smiled.

"Don't I? Well, perhaps I don't, but I am sure that it will interest Mr. Horace Harker and the subscribers of the Central Press syndicate. Now, Watson, I think that we shall find that we have a long and rather complex day's work before us. I should be glad, Lestrade, if you could make it convenient to meet us at Baker street at 6 o'clock this evening. Until then I should like to keep this photograph found in the dead man's pocket. It is possible that I may have to ask your company and assistance upon a small expedition which will have to be undertaken tonight if my chain of reasoning should prove to be correct. Until then, goodbye and good luck."

Sherlock Holmes and I walked together to the High street, where we stopped at the shop of Harding Bros., whence the bust had been purchased. A young assistant informed us that Mr. Harding would be absent until after noon and that he was himself a newcomer who could give us no information. Holmes' face showed his disappointment and annoyance.

"Well, well, we can't expect to have it all our own way, Watson," he said at last. "We must come back in the afternoon, if Mr. Harding will not be here until then. I am, as you have no doubt surmised, endeavoring to trace these busts to their source in order to find if there is not something peculiar which may account for their remarkable fate. Let us make for Mr. Morse Hudson of the Kennington road and see if he can throw any light upon the problem."

A drive of an hour brought us to the picture dealer's establishment. He was a small, stout man, with a red face and a peppery manner.

"Yes, sir. On my very counter, sir," said he. "What we pay rates and taxes for I don't know, when any ruffian can come in and break one's goods. Yes, sir, it was I who sold Dr. Barnicot his two statues. Disgraceful, sir! A nihilist plot—that's what I make it. No one but an anarchist would go about breaking statues. Red republicans—that's what I call 'em. Who did I get the statues from? I don't see what that has to do with it. Well, if you really want to know, I got them from Gelder & Co., in Church street, Stepney. They are a well known house in the trade and have been this twenty years. How many had I? Three—two and one are three—two of Dr. Barnicot's and one smashed in broad daylight on my own counter. Do I know that photograph? No, I don't. Yes, I do, though. Why, it's Beppo. He was a kind of Italian piece-work man, who made himself useful in the shop. He could carve a bit and gild and frame and do odd jobs. The fellow left me last week, and I've heard nothing of him since. No, I don't know where he came from nor where he went to. I had nothing against him while he was here. He was gone two days before the bust was smashed."

"Well, that's all we could reasonably expect from Morse Hudson," said Holmes as we emerged from the shop. "We have this Beppo as a common factor, both in Kennington and in Kennington, so that is worth a ten mile drive. Now, Watson, let us make for Gelder & Co. of Stepney, the source and origin of the busts. I shall be surprised if we don't get some help down there."

An Editor's Opinion of the Royal Gorge. Edyth Tozier Weathered, in describing a recent trip over the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad, says in "The Exposition": "At last the goal of the ambition of years has been reached—marvelous, wonderful, grand and inspiring Royal Gorge is on either hand. The only disappointing thing is you only have one pair of eyes, while the train darts in and out of the tremendous chasm. If any who have never seen it are wondering how it looks just go and see. Thousands have tried to describe it, yet every attempt falls short of giving the subject justice."
