FADELESS FLOWER.

A Pretty Australian Plant With Pleasant Fragrance.

Some very sensational statements have been given out concerning the prospective value of the new fadeless flower developed by Luther Burbank, Santa Rosa, Cal. It is declared the blooms are so attractive and permanent that they may be expected largely to displace artificial flowers for millinery and similar decorative purposes. Burbank's variety is not to be given to the public for a year or two, but seed of Cephalotium drummondii, the species from which it was selected, is freely offered this season by leading seedsmen for 25 cents a packet. This plant, a half hardy annual, was discovered in central Australia not long ago. It is easily grown from seeds, quickly making good plants, growing freely in any light garden soil. The blooms are shown in the illustration.

The color of the flower varies from black white to a pretty rose crimson, and the petals are produced in great profusion. At the end of every June the plant is cut back to a single stem, and the blooms are dried. The dried shape is preserved in the flower, as is the case with the other everlasting, immortelle and similar flowers, long known in Europe, such as resurrection lilies, lily of the valley, gypsophylla and the heliotropium, which are also dried as everlasting flowers. This new, to be expected, as new on forced is not a new plant, but is one of those of Burbank's, and it is not easy to understand why such great value and interest are attached to Burbank's "discovery," even though it may produce better and finer blooms.

The flowers of Cephalotium drummondii are neat and the color attractive, but they show little indication of being more durable than other immortelles when dried, as the attachment to the stalk is of a rather flimsy character. The color, though delicate and agreeable, will not suit every one. The retained perfume is a pleasing feature we have not noticed in other garden everlastings, though it is common with many grasses used for drying, concludes Rural New Yorker, in commenting upon the new floral sensation.

Planting Strawberries.

It has always been my practice to plant strawberries in rows three and one-half feet apart, and the distance in the rows depends very much on the variety. With such rank growing varieties as the Excelsior three feet in a row is plenty close enough. They will fill up then. But, taking a variety like the Novice or the Blatch, fifteen or eighteen inches would be better. There is quite a little talk about pedigree plants. I have had some experience along that line. All the pedigree I want is a good, thrifty plant true to the name, plenty of manure and plenty of cultivation. They cover the whole pedigree business as far as my judgment goes. In propagating strawberry plants it is not the varieties that can be grown, but the plants. A plant is nothing more than a cutting, and I have never even that there was any chance of its changing its character that way. —A New Jersey Strawberry Specialist.

Rose Cuttings.

The time to insert cuttings of roses is about the end of September or the month of October. Their growth then is practically complete and the shoots are fairly firm.

A plan which has been often successful is to take an ordinary garden frame, stand it on a hard bottom and in it place a compost made up of loam, self mold and sand in equal proportions. This must be thoroughly incorporated and when placed in position and pressed down firmly should be about six inches deep. It must then be watered and allowed to stand a few days before inserting the cuttings. These should be taken from shoots which have borne the first crop of roses of the year, as they will then be in the half ripened condition required. They must be stripped off with a slight heel and not cut from the plant. Four inches is the proper length for the cuttings. —Washington Star.

Hyacinth Beds.

Beds for hyacinth planting should be prepared with one-half of rotted turfy loam and one-half of equal portions of rotted manure, leaf mold and sand. The beds should be rounded up two to four inches above the path to carry off superfluous water.

Heavy Thinning For Plums.

The American plum fruit so heavily that in an experiment conducted at the Wisconsin experiment station it was found that nearly four-fifths of the crop should be removed in order to get really satisfactory results.

Died—Bernard. In Lakeview, Oregon, November 17, 1905, Mrs. Laura Bernard, deceased had no relatives here; her remains were interred in the L. O. O. F. cemetery.

Mrs. Ellen Jones, who has been here since October attending to business matters, left Monday morning for San Francisco, where she will spend the winter.

W. R. Bernard has bought the Wingfield residence, and will move to town to send his children to school. The house is a nice, large one, with plenty of ground.

Mrs. Crow, Mrs. W. H. Shirk's mother, will leave Lakeview shortly for California. She has been here most all summer, but the climate in winter does not agree with her.

J. B. West has been ousted from the registership of the Lewiston Idaho, land office on account of alleged dabbling in politics while in the conduct of official business. The Lewiston land office may remain closed for some time.

We understand that Mrs. C. W. Dent will take the infant girl babe of the girl who died last week, and raise it. There was talk of taking it away to an orphan's home, but as Mrs. Dent wanted to take the child, that seemed the best thing to do with it.

Mrs. G. W. Johnson and two little children are to go to Long Beach, a California health resort, for the benefit of Florence, one of the children, who has had pneumonia the past two winters. Miss Fannie Tonningsen and Miss Manning will also go to Long Beach. They will be away till next June.

R. M. McDonald has rented the house vacated by A. Florence. The house is furnished. Rolla's actions may seem rather strange in this matter, but he says his mother is coming over from Lebanon to live in the house. In the absence of no other explanation, we presume this one must be accepted.

If Lakeview is to have a Christmas tree this year it is high time that preparations was being made to insure the greatest success. The little children of Lakeview are as happy to see Christmas come as children in any other town, and it would be a shame to disappoint them by letting Christmas go by without having a tree.
