

The Derelict.

Jim Bannister jumped out of the train, his black bag in his hand, and his eyes went ranging up and down the platform in search of his wife and children. They generally were there to meet him when he came down from town on Friday evening. Finding that they were not visible, he left the station and took the road that led away from the town and the harbor towards the new suburb which had of late years set up in business as a watering place. It was cheap and healthy, and the boys liked to go down to the harbor and see the ships and talk to the sailors.

Bannister soon got out of town, for he was walking fast, but as the road began to rise his pace became slower till, as he neared the bend where the road turned toward the cluster of red brick villas, he was going quite leisurely.

A man was sitting on the stile at the corner—a tramp, he seemed to be. Bannister frowned. He was a hard-working man himself, and he did not like tramps—perhaps envied them a little. His face assumed a stern look as he went along.

As he approached the man got up and came slowly toward him. Yes, he was a tramp; there could be no doubt of it. His rough pilot cloth trousers idea of any girl waiting five years for an absent lover, without a word to show that he yet cared for her. He could have laughed at the idea of any woman waiting for the human wreck at his side. He could have laughed at the eager look on the man's half-savage face as he put his absurd question.

But there was a pathetic look in the brown eyes, and Bannister did not laugh. As he kept on looking the inclination to laugh died away altogether. Instead, he gave the answer that seemed to him at the moment the only possible one to give.

"A girl would wait ten years—twenty years—for the man she loved. That is, if she were a true woman. I am certain of it. I know it by my—I mean I am sure of it, from women I have known. Time makes no difference in their love. And absence only makes them love more strongly."

"You really think so?" asked the tramp, in a choking voice.

"I do."

The tramp stood still.

"I am glad to hear you say that," he said, huskily. "I am glad I asked you the question. You have put new life into me. Good-night, sir." And he was turning away.

"This will get you a bed and some were worn and stained. He wore no shirt, for the old tweed jacket was buttoned up to the neck. On his head was a battered soft felt hat; on his feet a pair of coarse seaman's shoes.

He stopped as he drew near the respectable man with the black bag, but he did not say a word. Bannister looked at him. Their eyes met, and the unspoken appeal was more eloquent than any words could have been. Plainly the man was a derelict.

So clear was the expression in the man's face that Bannister answered him as if he had spoken.

"Sorry I have nothing for you."

The man's swarthy cheeks flushed.

"Did I ask you for anything?" he said. Then the next instant: "I beg your pardon. I am wrong. I did, though not in so many words. I did. You look as if you needed help," Jim said awkwardly.

"Then my looks only tell the truth," said the derelict, and as he spoke he smiled. The smile startled Bannister. This was the face of a cultivated man, of what one calls a gentleman, dirty and unshaven as it was. He felt that he could not offer this tramp a copper.

"I am sorry," he said hastily, "but I can't stop to hear your story tonight."

"Did I offer to tell it?" said the man calmly.

"No. Yet I should like to hear it."

"I don't see the object of my telling it. It is a very common one. I quarreled with my best friend, an uncle. He treated me unjustly, or I thought he did. So I ran away to Australia to seek my fortune, and I found—this." He ended with a rueful downward glance at his tattered raiment.

"So you made your way back to the old country?" Bannister said, absently fingering the coins in his trousers pocket.

"Yes—and to the old town. And now that I have got here I can't find the courage to speak to a soul. You see, I worked my passage home, and I scarcely think any of my old friends would now be pleased to see me."

He gave a short, bitter laugh.

"But you must have some relatives?"

"Only the uncle I told you of. He is dead. I have seen his grave in the churchyard. And the old house is in the hands of strangers."

By this time they were moving on side by side, for Bannister was anxious to get home.

"I should like to ask your opinion about one thing," said the derelict, abruptly.

"Well, what is it?"

"In books, when a man goes off as I did, there is generally some one that cares for him. Now how long do you think a girl would be likely to wait for a fellow, never getting word or sign from him all the time? Would she be likely to wait five years, do you think?"

Jim Bannister could have laughed aloud. He could have laughed at the supper," said Bannister, handing him a silver coin.

The tramp looked from the money to the giver.

"I should like to send this back to you when I can," he said. "Will you tell me your name?"

"You needn't mind, but my name is Bannister. We are staying here for the rest of the month. Good-night," He waved his hand and was gone.

The tramp leaned over a gate, thinking. He could see the chimneys of the house that had been his uncle's, the house he had hoped would one day be his own. It belonged to Charley Hudson now. So he had been told in the 1870's.

But Margaret had preferred him, though some called him a ne'er-do-well. Was it possible that she had been waiting for him all these years?

The very thought made his heart burn. It seemed impossible. It was too much to expect from any girl. Yet that man—what was his name? Bannister—he had seemed to think it quite likely. He must find out. He must get some decent clothes so that he might make inquiries. Some one in the town must know what had become of her.

Another thing—he must send back that money to Bannister as soon as possible. But how was he to find him? He knew the man's name, but not his address; and he was only a summer visitor. He might not be able to repay the money for weeks. He turned and began running after Bannister as well as his clumsy shoes would let him. A little ahead there was a bend in the road, and he felt sure that once around that corner he would catch sight of him.

He turned the corner, and saw Bannister, but he was not alone. A girl in a light gray costume was coming rapidly to meet him. Two children darted from her side, and outrunning her, threw themselves into their father's arms.

The two, the man and the woman, came close together. She held up her face, and he stopped and kissed it.

It was not till then that he saw her face, Margaret!

His heart stood still. He would not believe it. Had not the man said—? But, of course, he could not know. Was it Margaret? He did not feel quite sure, now that her back was turned to him. But he felt that he must know at once.

At one side of the road there was a thick hedge, and a field on the other side of it. The tramp ran back to the gate, climbed over it, and then ran, under cover of the hedge, so as to pass beyond the little group. There was no difficulty about it. The hedge screened him completely. He could see them coming slowly along. The woman had her hand on her companion's arm, and she smiled into his face as they talked. It was Margaret her-

CAMERON'S WATERLOO.

And This Is a True Newspaper Story of Washington.

When he came into the office even the Angel Child knew he was looking for a job. It was written all over him, from the brim of his rusty hat to the tips of his well-worn shoes. And this is a true newspaper story of Washington.

The city editor knew what was coming, but refrained from signifying it until the request had been made.

"Nothing doing," said the city editor, "unless you can help out on sports. We need somebody there just now."

"Well, I can do a little of that," Cameron said, and so he came to work on The News.

Nobody knew where he hailed from, and the Bohemian spirit which rules the newspaper profession prompted no one to ask. Somebody noticed his shabby clothes, concluded his bank account was not in working order, and a "silent fund," subscribed by the staff, went to pay his board bill for two weeks and to put him on his feet.

He wrote sports, and soon aroused the newspaper fraternity by his wide knowledge of athletics and his supreme command of a vocabulary of slang the like of which had never been heard before, and which formed the basis for to-day's wonderful dictionary of sport terms.

His first distinguished himself by a daily series of baseball paragraphs which soon made the sport page of The News one of the most conspicuous features of the paper.

A still more brilliant achievement was in store for him, and a still greater surprise for the public, when one night the dramatic editor became ill and for sheer want of some one better to send the city editor told Cameron to cover Irving's performance of "Robespierre" at the National Theatre.

To the utter amazement of the entire staff, The News carried the next day a review of the performance which was a masterpiece of English in all its purity and splendid scope. Cameron was the only man who was not surprised in the sensation the review caused. He knew he could do it; the others didn't.

Cameron's versatility was marked. In unrelenting and far-reaching use of profanity Cameron found no takers. It just rolled out, and those who got to know Cameron best attempted nothing that savored of reform. He had not been on the paper two weeks before his reputation for profanity had left all others at the post, and the occasional expressions of disgust on the part of others sounded like the tinkle of a cow bell beside the rumbling flow of chosen words from Cameron when he was annoyed.

The boys didn't mind, but they quailed to think of what might happen if demure little Mrs. Parish, the social editor, ever heard Cameron swear. They dreaded the consequences, although nobody could really tell just what the result might be.

Cameron was a confirmed woman hater. He declared women to be the supreme nuisances of the earth and absolute impossibilities in business. That they should intrude into newspaper work and so hamper man's performance of his duties in a worthy calling he regarded with sincere contempt and unabated scorn.

Mrs. Parish, on the contrary, was a gentlewoman to the tips of her fingers. Her slow, deliberate manner of speech bespoke her gentle Southern ancestry and gave some indication of her fine womanly character.

Despite his profound antagonism toward the gentler sex, Cameron thought enough of his position on the paper not to offend Mrs. Parish.

One day, however, he came into the office from a baseball game. The home team had lost, the day was hot, and as if to add to Cameron's ill humor, he found Mrs. Parish at the big table in the center of the room, her exchanges completely covering what little space might have been left for anyone else. With one sweep of his arm Cameron sent the papers flying to every corner of the room, saying:

"To hell with all this rot!"

"Everybody heard. Every man in the room held his breath, expecting a scene. Mrs. Parish, manifestly surprised, looking calmly, first at the papers, then at Cameron, and in her slow gentle voice, as if she were repeating her charming "Good afternoon!" she said:

"That's what I say, Mr. Cameron. 'To hell with all this rot!' But you know if I don't do it I don't get my dinner. But just the same, I feel as you do, and when I go to some of these society people's houses and they compel me to talk with their servants rather than see me themselves, I say, 'To hell with them!'"

Cameron looked like a man overboard. He gathered up the papers from the floor one by one. A sheepish look that had never been there before came over his face, and when he had carefully piled the papers on the table before Mrs. Parish he said, loud enough for the entire room to hear:

"You keep your papers here when and as long as you please, and the first fellow who interferes with you I'll kick him full of holes."

EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY.

Mother of Captain Gridley, of Dewey's Flagship, Holds Reception.

Mrs. ANN E. GRIDLEY held a reception at her home in Washington, in December, in celebration of her eightieth birthday anniversary. The parlors were decorated in red with palms distributed about the rooms, making a pretty appearance.

Although an octogenarian, Mrs. Gridley is a well-preserved and active old lady, and discourses interestingly upon the remarkable changes which have come under her observations of seventy years.

Mrs. Gridley is the mother of the late Capt. Gridley, who commanded the flagship Olympia of Admiral Dewey's fleet in the naval action of Manila Bay.

Beats Hanging.

"James," said the teacher, "do you know what capital punishment is?"

"Yes, ma'am," said Tommy. "It's when a fellow is naughty, and his mother shuts him up in the pantry where she keeps the cake and jam."

It is calculated that there are 2,193 women journalists in the United States, 1,200 in Germany and 600 in England. Contrary to general impression, only 7 per cent of these are engaged in writing or editing fashion news.

SHE WORE ONLY SANDALS.

Pittsburg Society Shocked at Eminent Singer Who Does Not Believe in Wearing Stockings.

It is not considered proper to enter high society in Pittsburg without stockings on. Because she appeared without stockings at a reception given by society women of the East End, Madame Maria Sandal-Bransen, head of the vocal department of instruction at a fashionable musical school and wife of F. Celoste, of the Pittsburg Orchestra, has set the tongue of gossip wagging.

Mme. Sandal-Bransen does not believe in wearing stockings, and she has worn them since, when a girl of fourteen, her singing caught the fancy of King Oscar of Sweden, who paid for her education in the Conservatory of Music at Christiania. Mme. Bransen came to Pittsburg with her husband six weeks ago.

Since then she has been in popular demand at society functions, but no one ever suspected her antipathy to hosiery until this reception at the Musical Institute, when a careless little movement of the singer's gown disclosed a bare and dainty little foot inclosed in a sandal of ancient pattern.

FREE!

LADIES THIS Handsome Fur Scarf GIVEN AWAY

Send us your name and address and we will send you free and post-paid 24 pieces of our jewelry novelties to sell at 10 cents each. Everybody you show them to will buy them of you. When sold send us the $2.40 and we will at once send you this

Handsome Fur Scarf

It is nearly 48 inches long, made from black Lynx fur, has air full, bushy tips, very latest style, and we know you will be more than pleased with it. When you receive it you will say it is the most elegant and thoroughly good you have ever seen. Nothing similar to this scarf has ever before been offered as a premium; it will give years of satisfactory wear. It gives a stylish, dressy effect to the wearer's appearance. The only reason we can offer them is we had a large number of them made up for us by one of the large furriers during the summer when trade was quiet; this is the only reason we are able to offer such an expensive premium. We hope you will take advantage of our offer without delay. This is an extraordinary offer and cannot be duplicated by any other reliable concern. We trust you will enjoy the jewelry until sold. It costs you nothing to get this fur. Address,

COLUMBIA NOVELTY CO.,
Dept. 655, East Boston, Mass.

THE DANGER OF FILTH.

Crusade of New England Women to Encourage Cleanliness in Streets, Houses, Bodies, Clothes, Food and Drink.

The Woman's Health Club, of Boston, is doing an excellent work in the interests of public health by the publication of its booklets on hygienic subjects, and particularly by those which teach the great doctrine of cleanliness.

They are written in a plain style, which can be understood by everyone who makes an attempt to read, though it is to be confessed that they will never reach the great mass of free-born naturalized American citizens who never read anything—not even a yellow newspaper. Yet they will accomplish much in the direction of educating and enlisting leaders and teachers of the future work for civic and household cleanliness, and other organizations could with profit emulate the Boston example. It would awaken more people to the theory that they have a right to prevent injury from the uncleanness of others. Clean streets, clean houses, clean bodies and clothes, and, most of all, clean water and foods—these are the prerequisites of public health, and they are privileges which everyone should enjoy.

It has well been said that we have "God's own country, man's own back yards and the devil's own cesspool." We have not yet emerged from the conditions of medieval times—indeed, it is but a century since London itself was worse than a barnyard. At the rate that we are pouring filth into our rivers there will soon not be a clean stream east of the Rocky Mountains. By all means let the crusade go on, and let the woman's health clubs receive our blessing and perchance some more substantial assistance.

Pussy Cat Rhyme.

Can you tell me why
A hypocrite sly
Can better desecry
Than you can or I
On how many toes
A pussy cat goes?

A hypocrite neat
Can best counterfeit,
And so I suppose
Can best count her toes.

The Value of an Acre.

According to a statement prepared by a statistician, to sustain one person on fresh meat, 22 acres of land are required. If, however, this same amount of land be devoted to wheat culture it would feed 42 people; if to oats, 88; and if to potatoes, Indian corn and rice, 176 people.

A Happy Problem.

Pardon me, but I ought to tell you that Jones has run away with your wife.

Husband (bored)—Why run?

Goldfield, Nevada, has 250 incorporated Mining Companies, and instead of the barren desert of four years ago, is a bustling, bustling, up-to-date city of 8,000 inhabitants.

BOOKS—BOOKS

We have published some good ones specially suited for farmers. Books that will help every farmer to make more out of his farm. Write for our catalogue.

WEBB PUBLISHING CO.,
St. Paul, Minn.

Marlin Repeaters

are the original solid top and side electric. This feature forms a shield of metal between the shooter's head and the cartridge at all times, throws the empty away from him instead of into his face, prevents smoke and gases from entering his eyes and lungs, and keeps the line of sight unobstructed. The MARLIN action works easily and smoothly, making very little noise. Our new automatic recoil-operating locking device during the latest breech-loading gun ever built, 300 illustrations, cover in nine colors, mailed for three stamps.

The Marlin Firearms Co.
New Haven, Conn.

SUCCESS MAGAZINE

The Great Home Magazine of America

make this unequalled offer for a limited time only:

NEVER before in all our wide experience have we been in a position to make a book offer of such exceptional value. The Continental Encyclopedia has been added, illustrated, printed and bound with the view of filling a long-felt want in the home and office. It is comprehensive in scope, complete in topics, systematic in arrangement, and exceedingly convenient for use. The work weighs nearly eight pounds, is seven and one-half inches high, and occupies a shelf space of eight inches. Encyclopedias have become almost a necessary adjunct to business and most essential to home study. Questions are constantly coming up which require definite and authoritative answers.

Our Limited Offer

Success Magazine One Year $2.95

Continental Encyclopedia for both Express Prepaid

Eight Vols., Strongly and Richly Bound in Red Velum de Luxe cloth.

Edited by CHARLES LEONARD STEWART, B. A., of the staff of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, International Encyclopedia, Biographical Dictionary, etc.

Over sixty-five thousand important subjects are treated at length. The latest occurrences of international interest, such as the Russo-Japanese Dispute and War-Panama's Indemnity—Radio-Wireless Telegraphy, and the Alaskan Boundary Decision—all have their places in this set than work. In short, there is much later and better information in this set than in many a much more pretentious work. The business man, the teacher, the farmer, the professional man, the student, will all find it the ideal reference work of modern times, where concise, accurate, up-to-date information can be had on every subject without wasting words on non-essentials.

WE GUARANTEE SATISFACTION

We will send the eight volumes to you, neatly packed, express charges prepaid, upon receipt of your remittance of $2.95, and if you are not thoroughly pleased, send them back at our expense and we will refund the amount paid by you.

Fill out this coupon and send in TO-DAY.

This offer is limited to Feb. 1st, 1906.

Name _____ Address _____

THE SUCCESS COMPANY
Washington Square
NEW YORK

Herewith find $2.95 for each volume, express charges prepaid, and Success Magazine for one year with the understanding that if I am not satisfied I may return them without cost to me.