Another Reserve.

The forestry service has notified Senator Fulton of its intention to create the Heppner forest reserve, along the north fork of the John Day River, near Heppner, to embrace about 13 townships. A map of the proposed reserve has been submitted to the Senator, and he has been asked to make any suggestions of desirable changes in the boundaries. He will take up the matter with persons living in the immediate vicinity of the proposed reserve and transmit their views to the department.

The Senator has been assured that no grazing charges will be imposed this season for use of the range in the Heppner, Goose Lake or Fremont reserves, on or in any other reserves that may be created later this season. It is the intention of the department, however, to impose a charge next season on all reserves created this summer.—Oregonian.

A STORY OF WEBSTER

ONE OCCASION WHEN DANIEL WAS DEEPLY HUMILIATED.

An Incident Which Shocked and Surprised Him Into Tears—The Admiration, the Loyalty and the Generosity of His Circle of Friends.

The following incident in the life of Daniel Webster was related to the writer by the late Joshua Seward:

Mr. Seward came to Woburn from Boston in the early seventies and bought a farm, where he lived until his death in 1855. He was a native of the New Hampshire "Peace City," from which place he came to Boston in early manhood and later engaged in the literary business of School Street. He was a genial, social, active young man, and in a short time many of the business and professional men of the city were his friends and patrons. Daniel Webster, then in the fullness of his masterly manhood, was his particular friend and most favored patron. One year Webster early engaged to deliver the Fourth of July oration in the city.

A public procession was then an important feature of the celebration, and the orator of the day was the chief person of distinction in the parade. In those days there were no four wheeled vehicles for convenience or for pleasure. A chaise was the proper carriage for gentlemen to use. Webster was popular and proud as popular. He saw no chaise in the city as good as he desired to appear in on that important occasion, and therefore he ordered one to be built by the principal carriage maker of the city (Sargent, I think it was), to be ready for use on that day. In the morning of the Fourth he appeared at Seward's stable office and requested Seward to go to the carriage shop and get the chaise he had ordered. Seward harnessed a horse and went to the carriage shop as directed and told the proprietor he had come for Mr. Webster's chaise. The proprietor in firm and measured tones that could not be misunderstood asked, "Did Mr. Webster send the money to pay for the chaise?"

In relating this to me Seward said: "I was never so astonished in my life! I should have been less surprised if he had raised his fist and knocked me down. I had no thought that there was a man living who had ever heard of the great Webster, the godlike Daniel, who would or who could have denied him any request it was possible to grant. I could only say, 'He sent no money by me.' Then," said the proprietor, "tell him he can have the chaise when he sends the money to pay for it and not till then." Seward said he was never in such a dilemma in all his life. He could not go back and tell that great man, whom he adored, that he could not have the chaise till he paid for it. And yet he must go back and tell him something. But what could he tell him? Finally, after much thought and study it occurred to him that he had a new chaise which he would offer to Webster and tell him that the varnish on the one he had ordered was not yet hard and that it would be liable to injure if taken out in the heat and dust of that public day. Webster met Seward at the door when he returned, and before Webster could ask a question Seward was telling him the story he had invented on the way home. Webster made no reply, but accepted Seward's statement as true and rode in his chaise that day.

About a week later Webster came again and said to Seward, "I think the varnish on that chaise is hard now, and you may go down and get it." Seward said: "With a heavy heart I harnessed a horse and went again to the shop. I knew I should not get the chaise, and I was not disappointed. In the same manner I was asked the same question as before. I could not invent another story that would be credible and was therefore compelled to go back and tell him the truth." Webster was impatiently awaiting Seward's return, and when in halting distance he called to Seward: "Where is the chaise? What is the trouble?" Seward approached him more closely and in tones so low that no one could overhear him replied, "He told me to tell you that you could have the chaise when you sent the money to pay for it and not before." Webster stood silent an instant and then with voice trembling with emotion exclaimed, "My God, Joshua, did he say that?" and sank into a nearby chair and cried as would a deeply aggrieved child of six summers.

It is well known that Webster would incur debt, apparently with no thought that there were two parties to a contract, a creditor and a debtor, and that their moral obligations were equal. Consequently his creditors so multiplied and his indebtedness so increased as to interfere with his political plans, if not, indeed, threaten his political future. At this time his friends came to his aid and, it is said, raised the sum of $40,000 to cancel his indebtedness and relieve him from the further annoyance and pressure of his creditors. When we realize that $40,000 was a larger sum to raise then for any purpose than would be $200,000 today we have some measure of the admiration and the loyalty of his friends.—H. C. Hall in Boston Transcript.

Just So.

"I thought you said you couldn't live without me," sneered the girl. "So I did," answered the man. "Yet you're living." "No; I'm not. Just hearing; that's all."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

NO TWO MEN ARE ALIKE

There may be a hundred men in this city who have arms the same length as yours—but there is not one other man in the whole county who is the same as yourself in all other proportions.

It is simply an impossibility to get a perfect fitting suit by buying ready-to-wear clothes.

We will make a suit to your measure for $20. You pay that much, or nearly that much for every hand-me-down suit you buy.

Custom-made clothes—store clothes—are turned out by the thousand. They are cut and sewed by machinery.

That is why you have bought suits heretofore that did not fit you as well as you would like.

We will make a suit to your measure—for your vehicle, your work—that will fit you because it was built for you, and no one else—for $20.

We guarantee the cloth to be an all wool cloth—the cloth is new and virgin—just off the loom—no patterns—hand-picked—every seam hand-sewed with silk—lined with imported Venetian cloth.

We have selected several patterns, any of which we will make up to your measure for $25. Unless you express some preference we will mail you a sample of a fine English overcoat pattern.

This pattern is so new that it will be sold by tailors next year as the "latest."

The background of the pattern is a deep gray, with an almost imperceptible overline or check. The color of this fabric does not show dirt easily, does not wrinkle and has taken the dye so well that the garment looks like new until it is all worn out.

The wool used in weaving this garment was selected with unusual care. There is no short wool in the fabric and no shoddy. The cloth has no fit & weave that it presents a fairly hard surface, and at the same time is soft and pliable. It will not wear out or get shabby. This cloth cannot be bought from the mill for less than $1.50 a yard, no matter if you bought five thousand yards.

We are the Pacific Coast representatives of a grade of the largest woolen mills in the world. That enables us to make this unprecedented offer of a suit to your measure for $20. Send for a sample—mail it to you—see how long and even the wool strands are—note how well the dye has set.

Fill out this coupon and mail to us and we will send you a sample of the cloth. We guarantee that the sample is actually cut from the very bolt of cloth from which we make the suit.

When you visit Portland, come in and verify this or any assertion we make. If you wish, ask some Portland friend to tell you about the reputation and standing of the Columbia Woolen Mills Co.

Be sure and send for this sample. If you get a suit from this offer, you will be wearing a garment the pattern of which local dealers cannot possibly get in stock before another year. The pattern of our $20 suit will be sold next year as the latest (by other tailors).
