WEB OF THE SPIDER.

The Many Uses to Which Its Singular Spinner Puts It.

Spiders form good subjects for rainy day study, and two hours spent in a neglected garret watching these clever little belags will often arouse such faterest that we shall be glad to devote many days of squahine to observing those species which bunt and build and live in the open fields. There is no insect in the world with more than six legs, and as a spider has eight he is therefore thrown out of the company of butterfiles, beetles and waspo and finds himself in a strange assemblage. Even to his nearest relatives he bears little resemblance, for when we realfize that scorplons and horseshoe crabs must call him consin we perceive that his is indeed an aberrant bough on the tree of creation.

Nature has provided spiders with an organ filled nivrays with liquid, which on being exposed to the air hardens and can be drawn out into the slender threads which we know as cobwell. The sikworm incoses its body with a mile or more of gleaning silk. But there its usefulness is ended, as far as the allkworm is concerned. But spiders have found a hundred mess for their cordage, some of which are startlingly similar to human inventions.

A list of all the uses of cobwebs would take tauch space, but of these the most familiar is the sdare set for unwary files the wonderfully lagen lous webs which sparkle with dew among the grasses or stretch from bush The framework is of web bing, and upon this is woven the saleky spiral which is so clastic, so otherent, and yet strong enough to entangle a good sized insect. How knowing seems the little worker as, the web and his den of concealment being completed, he spins a strong cable from the center of the web to the entrance of his watentower. Then, when a trembling of his aerial spans warns him of a capture, how eagerly be selzes his nuster cable and jerks away on it, thus vibrating the whole structure and making more certain the confusion of his vic-

Those spiders which leap upon their prey instead of setting snares for it have still a use for their threads of life, throwing out a cable as they teap to break their fall if they miss their footbold. What a strange use of the cobweb is that of the little flying spiders! Up they run to the top of a post, elevate their abdomens and run out several threads, which lengthen and lengthen until the breeze catches them, and away goes the wingless aeronant for yards or for-miles, as fortune may dictate! We wonder if he can cut loose or pull in his balloon cables at will.

A most fascinating tale would unfold could we discover all the uses of cobwe's when the spiders themselves are through with it. Certain it is that our ruby throated humming bird robs many web to fasten together the plant down and tichen's which compose her dainty

Search the pond and you will find another member of the spider family swimming about at ease beneath the surface, thoroughly aquatic in his When his supply is low, he swims to a that he can keep it filled with a large bubble of air, upon which he draws from time to time; And so we might go on enumerating almost encless uses for the web, which is nature's gift to these little walfe who ages and left the sea and have won a place for themselves in the sunshine among the butterfiles and flowers.-C. William Beebe in New York

An Ingenious Ruse.

Herodotus tells of an ingenious ruse employed to carry an important message through the Enes of the enemy .. Histiaeus, being anxious to give Aristagoras orders to revolt, could think of no means to send the message to his ally, as all the roads were carefully guarded. Finally he hit upon a scheme. Calling his trustiest servant to him, he ordered that the man's hair be shaven off. He then pricked the desired message on the scalp of the slave and, waiting until his hair had grown out, dispatched him upon the errand. The messenger passed safely through the lines, and when he reached Aristageras his head was again shaved and the message read.

Perfumes.

Perfumes exercise a peculiar influence over one's nervous system. A faint, subtle odor is nearly always enervating, while a pungent, rich perfume often has a bracing effect. Civet induces drowsiness, a faint breath of musk invigorates and the perfume of the aloe and the citron is positively soothing and comforting. The delicate, spley odors of pinks, carnations, apple to be beneficial.
