STANDARD OIL COMPANY

Timber Land Deals.

The Examiner is prepared to handle timber lands in large or small bodies; the trouble has always been timber land owners have been scattered over the country and those who lived close enough together to list their lands in a sufficiently large body to make the sale one of importance to timber land purchasers, their lands have invariably been in such localities as would prohibit consolidation. We have arranged with a firm to take these isolated tracts, and by so doing, we are able to secure enough land in one body to make it an object to purchasers to investigate, and thus the lands will bring the highest market price. Parties owning but 100 or 80 acres will not be told by their intending purchasers that their tracts are too small to bother with. The company we are dealing with is absolutely responsible and has plenty of capital. Write The Lake County Examiner for full particulars.

If you have a piece of timber land to sell write The Lake County Examiner. We can place your land where it will bring the highest price.

WATER THE SHEEP.

Negligence in This Direction is Often a Serious Matter.

Many farmers seem to think that sheep will get along all right without water, and they are often neglected in this direction. It is a bad mistake, and every one who makes it pays heavily for the blunder.

Recently I put a flock of ewes and lambs on a piece of wheat stubble to destroy the ragweed that had started up after the wheat was cut, writes E. P. Snyder in Ohio Farmer. There was no water in the field, and the sheep were left there only two days. During that time two good showers fell. The feed they got was of course tender and succulent, and I thought they would not suffer for want of water for that length of time. When I took them back to their permanent pasture I was surprised to see them rush for the water at the roadside and line up at every mud puddle to quench their thirst, and as soon as they got to the pasture they ran helter skelter for the water at the farther side of the field.

Ewes Need Water.

One of my neighbors changed his eyes to a pasture where there was no water. It was early in the season. The grass was fresh and luxuriant, and he thought they'd perhaps do all right without water. After they had been there a week he went to see them and was surprised at their gaunt appearance. He immediately took them out.

In taking them back to their creek pasture he had to pass a large public water tank. He said it was surprising to see them crowd up to that tank to slake their thirst. They lowered the water in the tank five inches before leaving it. Ewes suckling lambs especially need water. They may possibly live without it, but they'll certainly bring little or no profit to their owners. The question of profit and loss aside, as a matter of humanity sheep should never be compelled to go without an ample supply of pure water.

Care of Winter Lambs.

The winter lamb is an unnatural product, born under the most adverse conditions, when the days are growing colder, when the grass is frosted and seared. It is necessary to resort to artificial feeds and to apartments inside the building where economy of production requires a duplicate of summer conditions as nearly as possible. The barn must be perfectly dry, well lighted and thoroughly ventilated. Without these conditions we can never hope for the greatest degree of success in rearing and fattening lambs in winter.—Frank D. Ward, New York.

THE SWINEHERD

Large herds of swine should be divided so that not more than a few dozen animals are kept together.

Each sow should have a separate pen for herself and her pigs.

The boar should not be permitted to run with the herd.

The pens, troughs and all the surroundings of the hog should not only be cleaned frequently, but disinfected. The food for swine should be selected carefully.

Do not feed corn exclusively and be careful to supply enough green food in the winter time.

Sorghum is especially recommended as a winter food.

Always heat the hogs' food in cold weather for the animals' comfort and well being.

Get out of your head that anything is good enough for the pig. Remember, rather, that nothing is too good for the pig.—Farmers Advocate.

Preventing Disease.

The heavy losses in hogs are largely due to transmissible diseases. The organisms that produce such diseases enter the system in the feed and air. Muddy or dusty yards, crowded conditions and filthy floors or troughs are responsible for most of the cholera and swine plague. Young hogs are more susceptible than mature animals. Naturally they need better care. The pens and yards should not be neglected because there is a pasture. Keep them well drained and disinfected. Use whitewash freely about the houses and fences. Plow the unused lots and sow rape, oats or cowpeas. Spray the house, feeding floors and troughs thoroughly with a disinfectant every two or three weeks. Tar disinfectants are most convenient. They should be used in not less than a 3 per cent water solution. Spray or dip the hogs occasionally in a 1 per cent water solution. Young hogs should not be given crowded quarters. Provide a diet that will keep them healthy and help them to resist disease. Keeping the hogs under the best sanitary conditions and using every precaution to prevent infection from the outside are the most satisfactory methods of avoiding loss from transmissible diseases.—R. A. Craig, Purdue University Experiment Station.

Hog Notes.

Be careful in selecting your new boar.

Mature sows, bred to good boars, insure strong, healthy pigs.

Holding fat hogs for a higher market is oftentimes courting cholera.

Don't think that the hog has cholera just because he is off feed for a day.

Plenty of sunlight in the hog house from now until next June is necessary. You may have a favorite strain, but don't stick to it until it has degenerated.

Give the hopen a rest. Move the hogs to another pen or to the pasture.

Keep the pens and yards sanitary, but don't stop with that. Keep the hog's digestion in prime order.

The construction of the pig trough may seem like a small thing, says Kimball's Dairy Farmer, but there's millions in it for the pigs.

Nothing has ever equalled it. Nothing can ever surpass it.
