Deafness Cannot be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

SHELTER FOR THE FLOCK.

Sheep Can Be Made Comfortable at Very Little Cost.

As it is economical on the part of any owner of any animals to feed well during the winter and to keep the stock in the best condition, it is the best plan for him to provide good warm shelter for all his animals. This refers most particularly to a flock of sheep, says the American Sheep Breeder. It is commonly thought, and the thought is commonly expressed, that sheep, being provided with a thick woolly coat in the winter, do not require any other shelter than a board fence and a comfortable yard to pass the nights in. It is a very common accident for such persons to lose a few sheep and lambs every winter by exposure to cold and neglect. Animals suffer from cold when they are shivering in an exposed yard on a cold winter's night quite as much as their owners may do under similar exposure. And it is a waste of money, for food is the same as money to the owner of a flock of sheep. Of course this error reduces the profits from a flock of sheep that is exposed to the cold.

Protection at Small Cost.

It will cost very little to make the sheep comfortable. A rough board shed that will break the force of the cold winds will be sufficient. It should have a tight roof that it may be dry. Dry cold is far more bearable than a much better temperature with a wet skin. But the wind of a cold freezing night when the sheep fleeces are water soaked will kill sheep that would be comfortable if their skins were dry and protected by the dry fleece. It is quite often thought sufficient that the sheep were sufficiently protected by their woolly coat although exposed to rainstorms which froze the fleeces on their backs. The truth is that the fleeces of a sheep should not be considered in this part of their management as any greater protection than the hairy coat of a cow, and the flock should have as much care for their protection as all other animals of the farm get.

Ventilation is a very important part of the management of all shelters for sheep—indeed, for all animals. The rule should be to give a square yard of floor space for every sheep in sheds or covered yards at the least. This is twice as much as the sheep will cover, thus leaving half the floor for moving space. The sheep will habitually lie close together, and thus there will be ample room for the wanderers to move about comfortably. Some of the sheep will bunch together, but this will be perfectly safe, for sheep may safely crowd together if there is ample room for all and none pile up on the others. The only safe rule in the management of sheep is to wholly prevent by sufficient precautions any risk of panics in the yards or sheds, as may happen by the presence of a dog in the place. Strange dogs should always be kept from the sheep. The home dog may go anywhere among them with safety, but a strange dog may cause a panic in which some sheep will be lost. Thus the fences of the open sheep yards should be well protected by two strands of barbed wire on the top.

BREEDING THE DRAFT HORSE

Men who began to breed draft horses from a native foundation years ago and have kept steadily at it are now reaping the fruits of their labors. It is a safe statement that no branch of live stock husbandry has paid better through the lapse of years than this. Down at the Illinois state fair an exhibitor showed in a ring of aged mares four full sisters, the eldest nine years old, all tracing to one little mare which more than a quarter of a century ago was bred to a draft stallion. It has taken four crosses of pure blood to make a mare eligible to record in some standard books, and on top of those this man now has three more, or six generations in all, of registered stock on the side of the dam. The four full sisters in question weighed respectively from ten pounds less than 1,500 to as many pounds more than 1,900 pounds, and they were only in ordinary farm condition. That was not a good thing for exhibition purposes, of course.

A PERCHERON PRIZE WINNER.

but it showed that the mares had been bred big and did not need great masses of beef to make them weigh up into the real drafter class.

The expense at which this result has been achieved cannot be computed, for there was no expense attached. Indeed there was only large profit, and the owner says that nothing he has ever had on his farm has paid him so well as his horses. He can sell them now as two-year-olds for long prices, and he never has to wait for a buyer. It is known that his horses have the weight and the shape, and they go whenever he is ready to let them.

Asked what his ideas and intentions were when he first began the grading process, he said he believed that some day heavy horses would be in better demand than light ones and that anyway he needed more team power on his farm. He kept steadily on through the lean years and the fat years and now has a good many thousand dollars running around his fields wrapped up in bay hides and plenty more in the stable. There has been much discussion as to the advisability of recording four-cross mares, but that is not material to this statement. The fact remains that he has now nothing but registered horses on his farm and that he should be able to go to a state fair and win with some of them speaks well for the work that he has done.

THE SWINEHERD

Feed the hogs regularly. Condiments and stock foods are no more required for the average hog than medicine is for a healthy man. Watch the fattening hogs closely and regulate the quantity of food given by the condition of their appetite. A veteran breeder says of the ideal hog, "You can cut off his head and legs and put him into a box, and he will fit." Many feeders fail to recognize the difference between developing and fattening. Disinfectants are more necessary in the hogpen than in any other place on the farm. When a pig comes hurrying to his breakfast with a glad squeal it is a sign his health is at par. Plenty of pasture is good for the sow, but that does not mean that she must rustle for a living. The dipping vat is important if you want to keep healthy hogs. With brood sows as with dairy cows—keep the best mothers. The sow that raises seven or eight pigs in her first litter is the sow you need in your business. Care of Breeding Hogs. On the average dairy farm swine are usually kept to a greater or less extent. Where this is the case the farmer will usually find it cheaper and better to raise his own pigs instead of buying them, writes a Vermont breeder in the American Cultivator. Every farmer need not keep a boar, but he should keep one or more brood sows. Having obtained a good animal for the purpose, mate with a male of the best ancestry. Having obtained sows that prove to be prolific and good mothers, it will be better to keep them for several years, raising two litters of pigs a year, rather than make frequent changes. Where pigs are raised in cold weather there should be good, warm quarters, and with these and proper feed and care there need be little or no trouble. We have just as good success with pigs in winter as in summer, either in growing or fattening. Proper conditions and care are what are needed. To make the business most successful there should be at least a moderate supply of milk during the winter. The breeding sows should not be very highly fed, only when suckling a brood of pigs, but should have a moderate amount of nourishing food, with little or no grain.

To Relieve a Choking Animal.

When one of my animals chokes on apples or similar substances I have a remedy that never fails, says an Ohio breeder. I fasten a rope or strap around the body just back of the forward legs, then fasten a stick of wood large enough to keep the mouth wide open in the mouth by a string passing over the head. Hold the nose out so it will strain the neck; then give the animal a sudden sharp punch in the body between the ribs and hips, and the substance will fly out through the mouth.

Limewater For Pigs.

Disinfectants and correctives should be kept convenient to the hog yards and houses and used whenever there appears to be occasion for them. Charcoal, ashes, coppers and the like should be kept where the hogs may help themselves at will. Use lime-water freely about the pens and houses and in the slop. It is at once a disinfectant and a deodorizer. It prevents indigestion and furnishes elements of bone growth.
