LAKEVIEW, OREGON, APR. 25 1907

The Character, Not the Man.

People take Mr. Roosevelt seriously in everything he says. They do not believe he was less in earnest when he said he would not again be a candidate for the presidency than when he declared it should be his endeavor to see that every citizen receive a square deal. This confidence in the constancy of his purpose is the president's great strength with the people.

The people will never allow McKinleyism to gain ascendancy in the administration of this government again. Mr. McKinley, though a good man, was as clay in the hands of predatory corporations. He wished to compel them to obey the law, but was persuaded by them, through the opinion of his attorney-general, their ally, that the law was impotent, and that congress could not constitutionally enact a law capable of restraining them from unlawful, unjust discriminations.

constitution as it is, then we will amend the constitution so that justice may be done. The country knows the results.

This is but one of many instances in which Mr. Roosevelt gained decided victories for justice by and through the law which Mr. McKinley regarded as weak and incapable of enforcement. Thus we show what the country regards as Rooseveltian in character as opposed to so-called McKinleyism, to which the country will never return.

Robbers of the public, said to Mr. McKinley, the country is prosperous. If you assail, through the courts, the transportation systems of the country you will cause to be lost by disturbance of internal commerce all that has been gained to the industrial interests by the enactment of a sensible protective tariff. Mr. McKinley yielded to fright and did nothing. The packers of Chicago told Mr. Roosevelt he would ruin their business and consequently the live stock business of the country if he persisted in demanding the enactment of a law for the inspection of meat products.

If our laws are enforced liberty is safe. There has never been a doubt of our security and the stability of our institutions arising from any other source than feebleness in the character of executive officers and timidity of the courts. Mr. Roosevelt has demonstrated that obedience can be enforced without prejudice or danger to any legitimate business. In this he has had the co-operation of many able men, some one of whom is capable of filling his place. If no other man who will surely continue the president's executive policy can be nominated, then Mr. Roosevelt will be. His enemies are too wise to create such a condition.

Earthquakes and volcanoes devastated several cities and towns in Mexico last week. The loss of life is not nearly so great as that caused by the earthquake of a year ago in California. Property loss is quite heavy. Several towns are entirely buried, though most of the inhabitants were rescued. While there was no earthquake in San Francisco on the anniversary of the quake and fire of April 18, 1906, there was no doubt considerable "shaking" when the reports of the terrible earthquakes of Mexico a day or so before the anniversary came to the ears of San Franciscans.

Just what William J. Bryan will build his platform out of for his next presidential campaign is yet to be learned. Late dispatches state that he has discarded three of the strongest planks in his former platform, those of government ownership of railroads, free silver and anti-imperialism. These were about the only things that Mr. Bryan seemed to stand for in his former campaign, and with the elimination of all of these it would be interesting to know just what he intends to advocate in his next campaign for the presidency.

An alleged plot to kill president Roosevelt is being investigated in New York by the United States Secret Service. A man who said he was one of a band of Pennsylvania Anarchists disclosed the plot to the chief of police of New York, just before the latter shot and killed himself. The anarchist said he had been turned out and disclosed the plot for revenge.

The evidence in the Hermann case in Washington, D. C., is all in and the argument by counsel begun last Friday. It is not expected that the case will be submitted to the jury before last night or today.

He names as witnesses: C. L. Withers, J. K. Banister, C. W. Withers, T. C. Welch, all of Paisley Oregon. Timber Land Deals. The Examiner is prepared to handle timber lands in large or small bodies; the trouble has always been timber land owners have been scattered over the country and those who lived close enough together to list their lands in a sufficiently large body to make the sale one of importance to timber land purchasers, their lands have invariably been in such localities as would prohibit consolidation. We have arranged with a firm to take these isolated tracts, and by so doing, we are able to secure enough land in one body to make it an object to purchase to investigate, and thus the lands will bring the highest market price. Parties owning but 100 or 80 acres will not be told by their intending purchasers that their tracts are too small to bother with. The company we are dealing with is absolutely responsible and has plenty of capital. Write The Lake County Examiner for full particulars. If you have a piece of timber land to sell write The Lake County Examiner. We can place your land where it will bring the highest price.

FINAL PROOF. Department of the Interior, Land Office at Lakeview, Oregon, Apr. 4, 1907. M., and that said proof will be made before Register and Receiver, at Lakeview Oregon on 17th day of May, 1907. He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon, and cultivation of the land viz: John Noble, John Snider, A. P. Koozer, J. W. Fitzwater, all of Lakeview, Oregon. J. N.
