

HE WAS VEXED.

What the Mississippi Throated to Do With Overdrawn Account.

"Private" John Allen tells some good stories of a man in Jackson, Miss., who, so far as his financial notions go, is of the type made famous by "Colonel Carter of Cartersville."

The cashier of the bank at Jackson, with which the Mississippi did business, one day very politely intimated that the gentleman's account was overdrawn. Thanking him profusely for the information, the Jackson man left the building, promising that the situation would be remedied the following day. But nothing was heard from him then nor for some weeks after. Then, when the cashier had an opportunity to do so, he again referred to the matter, remarking that the gentleman was now even further indebted to the bank than before. Again came the polite assurance that the matter was to be adjusted that day, and again did the Jackson man fail to keep his promise.

On his next visit to the bank the president himself took occasion to call the depositor's attention to the situation. The Mississippi became very indignant. "Look here, sir," he exclaimed, "this makes the third time the officials of this bank have pestered me about that measly overdrawn account. If you don't quit bothering me about it, I'll take it to another bank!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Ingenuous Bathubs.

The Philadelphia was staying at a hotel in a Georgia town. He rang for an attendant, whom he asked if bathubs were provided.

"Yessuh," answered the negro, "we've got some nice tubs, and he presently returned bearing on his shoulders a coffin with silver plated handles and lid all complete.

"What do you mean by bringing me that?" demanded the traveler.

"Dat's de bathub, suh."

"The bathub?"

"Yessuh. You see, suh, de landlode he used to be in de undertakin' business, an' he had a lot o' coffins on han', an' when he sol' out an' took dis hotel he brought all de coffins de new man didn't want. His son is in de tinsmith business, suh, so he done had de coffins lined wit tin, an' dey make nice bathubs. Jes' you try an' you'll find dis one all right."—Washington Star.

What He Offered to Do.

Patrick O'Rourke, a familiar character who was known to practically every one in his town, had occasion to appear before a police magistrate to answer a charge of larceny. After hearing the testimony of two witnesses who said they saw Pat take the goods, the magistrate said:

"Well, Pat, I think you are guilty."

"And what makes you think that?" asked Pat.

"These two men, who say they saw you take the goods."

"And is that all?" asked Pat, in surprise. "Why, moon, I can bring 200 min who will swear they didn't see me take them!"—Green Bag.

Breaking It Gently.

"Look out! Look out, mother! You're breaking the ice!"

"You horrid child! How dare you shout at your mother so before all these people?"—New York Herald.

New View of Nero.

During a recitation in history in a Baltimore public school the teacher once put the question:

"Who was Nero?"

"I don't know exactly, ma'am," said the pupil addressed, a girl of ten, "but I think he's the one they sing about in Sunday school."

"In Sunday school?" repeated the teacher, unable to recall any religious music having Nero as its theme.

"What do you mean?"

"Don't you know the hymn, ma'am?" asked the girl, surprised. "It's 'Nero, My God, to Thee.'"—New York Press.

A Pun For the Butcher.

Butcher—Here you are, madam. Prime piece of mutton. Best value in town.

Old Lady (examining)—Look here, Mr. Robert, I won't take it. You call it prime; I call it Napoleon.

Butcher—Napoleon! You don't mean the meat is old, madam, do you?

Old Lady—No, but there's too much bouy part about it for me.—Tit-Bits.

As Customs Change.

"In the medieval days," said the romantic person, "a man who stepped on the street with a sword was liable to be run through at any moment."

"Yes," answered the pedestrian, "and now we merely get run over!"—San Francisco Examiner.

DAUGHTER OF BRET HARTE.

Flight of Mrs. Jessamy Harte Steele, Artist and Illustrator.

Much interest has been aroused in the case of Mrs. Jessamy Harte Steele, who, though a daughter of the famous author Bret Harte, found herself stranded in an almshouse in Portland, Me., a short time ago. Mrs. Steele undertook to give a course of readings from her father's works to raise money for her support, but was too ill to carry out the plan. Her funds and her credit both being exhausted, there was no place left for her but the poorhouse. There she remained for some time until friends assisted her to get to New York and arranged for a benefit performance of "Salomy Jane," founded on one of Bret Harte's stories, the proceeds to go to the author's daughter. The latter took with her to New York the manuscript of a dramatization she has written of her father's story, "Thankful Blossom," and she hopes to have the piece produced.

Bret Harte died in 1902, leaving little for his family. In the days when

MRS. JESSAMY HARTE STEELE.

Harte and Mark Twain (Samuel L. Clemens) were rising stars in the field of literature, it is said, helped to give the greatest of American humorists his chance by aiding him in the production of "The Jumping Frog." Whatever the facts, in some way a disagreement is said to have arisen between the two men in this connection, and when Mr. Clemens was asked by Miss Eleanor Robson, who takes the leading part in "Salomy Jane," to grace the benefit with his presence he declined to do so, saying the promoters of the benefit could use his name as a patron of the affair, but he did not feel it incumbent upon him to attend the performance.

As Miss Jessamy Harte, the daughter of the noted author, was considered to have a brilliant future as an artist, her work as an illustrator at one time attracted considerable attention. A writer thus described her about a dozen years ago: "For her beauty it is not necessary to say that she has a dainty white complexion, with blue eyes set under heavy straight black brows. Her mouth is perhaps the prettiest feature of her face—a regular Cupid's bow, painted with red rosebuds."

NORDICA'S BIRTHPLACE.

Operatic Star's Childhood Home is Now in Her Possession.

Mme. Lillian Nordica, the great operatic singer, was born in Farmington, Me., in 1859. Her father, Edwin Norton, was a man who was much esteemed in the community, and his departure from it when the education of his children occasioned the removal of the family to Boston was much regretted. Within a few weeks Mme. Nordica has come into possession of the home of her childhood. There are fifty acres of wooded slope about the house, and the home itself was built by her father on land which had been in possession of the family for several generations. The prima donna, who in private life is Mme. Dome, already has one beautiful home located on the Hudson a few miles from New York. The place at Farmington, Me., she will occupy as often as her frequent travels allow, and she expects to make it a sort of family museum, collecting for it the family portraits, furnishings which were her mother's, pictures of herself in different roles and busts, casts and correspondence of fellow artists and other things pertaining to herself or other members of her family. Considerable money will be spent upon the improvement of the grounds, and the estate will be known as Nortonwoods. Plenty of the Farmington villagers remember little Lillian Norton, and none of them ever dreamed that she would one day be a great singer and come back after triumphs in all parts of the world to buy and adorn the old farm and the house where she was born.

NORDICA AS A GIRL AND HER CHILDHOOD HOME.

COMPOUND INTEREST

The trouble with most advertisers is that they expect immediate returns of large proportions. One prominent advertiser illustrates the principle of advertising in this way:

"The money expended for advertising is the same as if placed at interest. The profits from the advertising are virtually the interest on the investment."

"The sums spent for advertising are properly chargeable to capital account because the resulting good will is something that has value, which, if the advertising has been properly done, can usually be sold for the face value of the investment."

"The rate of interest is determined by the skill with which the investment is made."

"Just as the quickest way to increase invested wealth is by compounding the interest, just so the quickest way to realize results from advertising is to compound the returns."—Advertising Experience.

Mining Law.

A mining claim must not exceed 1500 feet in length along the vein or lode, by 600 feet in width, 300 feet on each side of center of vein at surface. Within thirty days after posting notice the boundaries must be marked by six substantial posts, projecting not less than three feet above the ground, and not less than four inches square in diameter, or by substantial mounds of stone, or earth and stone at least two feet in height at each corner and at center ends of such claims.

The location notice must be filed with the county recorder or county clerk within sixty days after posting the same upon the claim. Attached to the notice must be an affidavit showing that the work required by the State law has been performed.

Section Three of the Act of 1901, known as H. B. No. 1, is as follows:

Before the expiration of sixty days from the date of posting said notice of discovery upon his claim aforesaid, and before recording the notice of location, the locator must sink a discovery shaft upon the claim located to a depth of at least ten feet, or an open cut at least six feet deep by four feet wide and ten feet in length along the lode from the point where the same may be in any manner discovered, is equivalent to such discovery shaft. Such work shall not be deemed a part of the assessment work required by the revised statutes of the United States.

The Badge of Honesty

Is on every wrapper of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because a full list of the ingredients composing it is printed there in plain English. Forty years of experience has proven its superior worth as a blood purifier and invigorating tonic for the cure of stomach disorders and all liver ills. It builds up the run-down system as no other tonic can in which alcohol is used. The active medicinal principles of native roots such as Golden Seal and Queen's root, Stone and Mandrake root, Bloodroot and Black Cherrybark are extracted and preserved by the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce at Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet which quotes extracts from well-recognized medical authorities such as Drs. Bartholow, King, Scudder, Coe, Ellingwood and a host of others, showing that these roots can be depended upon for their curative action in all weak states of the stomach, accompanied by indigestion or dyspepsia as well as in all bilious or liver complaints and in all "wasting diseases" where there is loss of flesh and gradual running down of the strength and system.

"The Golden Medical Discovery" makes rich pure blood and so invigorates and regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, and through them, the whole system. Thus all skin affections, blotches, pimples and eruptions as well as scrofulous swellings and old open running sores or ulcers are cured and healed. In treating old running sores, or ulcers, it is well to insure their healing to apply to them Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve. If your druggist don't happen to have this Salve in stock, send fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and a large box of the "All-Healing Salve" will reach you by return post.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may erably make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.
