COMPOUND INTEREST
 The trouble with most advertisers is that they expect immediate returns of large proportions. One prominent advertiser illustrates the principle of advertising in this way:
 "The money expended for advertising is the same as if placed at interest. The profits from the advertising are virtually the interest on the investment."
 "The sums spent for advertising are properly chargeable to capital account because the resulting good will is something that has value, which, if the advertising has been properly done, can usually be sold for the face value of the investment."
 "The rate of interest is determined by the skill with which the investment is made."
 "Just as the quickest way to increase invested wealth is by compounding the interest, just so the quickest way to realize results from advertising is to compound the returns."—Advertising Experience.
 Advertisers get good returns on the amount invested in our columns. We reach the people.

Notice
 TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN
 notice is hereby given that all irrigation, or millrace ditches on all streams, throughout Lake County, Oregon, must be screened with a small mesh wire screening at their head or junction with the main channel of stream. The Simplified Army.
 [One hundred thousand persons in the United States are using simplified spelling today.—Professor Brander Matthews.] List to the chant of the faithful, spelling the newfangled spell, Unyielding few making it "thru"—course that none can quell; Look at the hundred thousand simplified devotees. Spelling book rules fathered by fools never will do for these. Take up the spell of the faithful—predecessors fairly upset. A turn of the writ making it "kist"—short cuts are best, you bet! Hall to the hundred thousand—in stubbornness are they rich—Fighting for "thoru" in every borough, yielding not in the last ditch. Spelling the spell of the faithful, using the pruning knife—Unto the last passed must be "past"—such is the simple life; Phonetical hundred thousand, sounding old Noah's knell—Brander and Andy are all the candy in the land of the simplified spell! —Denver Republican.

Celebrities
 Eugene V. Debs, Labor Leader and Socialist Mrs. William T. Stead, Daniel C. Gilman—Sir Chentung Liang Cheng—Miss Clara Clemens, Adolphus Busch and the Earthquake.

EUGENE V. DEBS, who was classed by President Roosevelt in the now historic Sherman letter as an "undesirable citizen," along with Moyer and Ifay wood and E. H. Harriman, is labor leader, lecturer and bearer of the standard of socialism. He is fifty-two years of age and came into prominence about fifteen years ago as president of the then powerful American Railway union. He has twice been candidate for president on the Socialist ticket. He was once asked what would be done with such captains of industry as Rockefeller, Carnegie, Havemeyer and the Goulds and Vanderbilts under a socialistic regime.
 "Their wealth will be gradually absorbed into the common ownership of products," he replied. "We offer them a glorious field for their energy and genius. A man like Mr. Rockefeller could organize and direct the oil industries of the country for the benefit of the people. He would live comfortably and, I believe, happily and would not have to be awake at night racked with the responsibilities of too great wealth.
 "Mr. Havemeyer could preside over the sugar making industries and see that they were managed prudently. Mr. Carnegie would be a great power in the building up of a co-operative commonwealth. We have no word of abuse for rich men. A man who has many millions is the unhappy slave of his money. Our co-operative commonwealth will relieve the millionaire as well as the involuntary tramp. The wealth of the country and the machinery for turning it into useful forms must be owned by the people in common."
 When Andrew Carnegie invited the noted English editor and reformer William T. Stead to visit America at his expense to attend the dedication of the Carnegie Institute and the sessions of the national arbitration and peace congress, he told him to bring his wife along. The editor decided to accept the steel magnate's invitation for his wife as well as for himself, and Mrs. Stead has expressed herself as greatly enjoying her stay among Americans. She was Miss Emma L. Wilson and married Mr. Stead in 1873. Mr. and Mrs. Stead have had four sons and two daughters. Two of their sons married American women—William, Miss Royce of Chicago, and Alfred, Miss Hussey of Indianapolis. Mrs. Stead has stood loyally by her eminent husband in all the strenuous episodes of his distinguished and useful career.

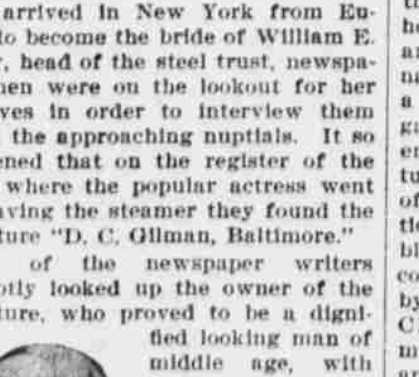

Dr. Austin Flint, the famous alienist, who testified in the Thaw case, said at the Century club in New York apropos of a will contest that had been tried last year.
 "The plaintiff lost, and no wonder. His case was as difficult a one as that of the young man who appeared unduly depressed after the death of his rich aunt."
 "Why are you so sad?" an acquaintance said to the young man. "You never appeared to care much for your aunt."
 "I didn't," said the youth dolefully. "but I was the means of keeping her in an insane asylum the last five years of her life, and now that she has left me all her money I've got to go to court and prove that she was of sound mind."
 When the noted actress Mabelle Gilman arrived in New York from Europe to become the bride of William E. Corey, head of the steel trust, newspaper men were on the lookout for her relatives in order to interview them about the approaching nuptials. It so happened that on the register of the hotel where the popular actress went on leaving the steamer they found the signature "D. C. Gilman, Baltimore."
 One of the newspaper writers promptly looked up the owner of the signature, who proved to be a dignified looking man of middle age, with impressive side whiskers.
 "Have you seen Mabelle today?" asked the reporter. The stranger looked at his questioner in some wonderment.
 "No, I have not seen Mabelle," he replied tartly.
 "Do you approve of Mabelle's marriage?" another reporter asked.
 "Who is Mabelle?" asked the interviewed guest, evidently puzzled.
 "Why, Mabelle Gilman, the actress and fiancée of William Ellis Corey. Isn't she your daughter?"
 The scholarly man walked away indignantly.
 "That's Dr. Gilman, former president of Johns Hopkins and head of the Car-negle Institute," an attaché of the hotel said.

 The reporters hurried after Dr. Gilman to apologize, but failed to find him.

There has been a good deal to disturb pleasant relations between Americans and Chinese since Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, who is about to retire from the post of Chinese minister to the United States, took up his residence at Washington. The boycott of American goods resulting from resentment at the way the Chinese exclusion law was enforced in this country created a situation full of difficulty and embarrassment for the diplomats of the two countries concerned, but no serious quarrel came of it, a fact considered much to the credit of the Chinese minister, LIANG CHENG, who is quite American in his ideas, owing, in part, to his having been educated as a young man at American institutions of learning. He has been recalled in order that he may receive promotion from his government for his valuable services as a diplomat. Sir Chentung is to be appointed a member of the Chinese board of foreign affairs, a body created after the suppression of the Boxer uprising. His successor in this country will be Liang Tun Yeng, at present Chinese customs taotal at Tientsin.
 Sir Chentung approves of many of the improvements in vogue in America, but he has an aversion to automobiles. For this he is indebted to an experience he had in California when he was on his way to make an address at the state university. In relating his adventure Sir Chentung said:
 "I noticed in front of me a long, wet stretch of muddy street, and without any warning the machine headed for the nearest lamp post. I told the chauffeur to straighten his course, and he just stuck his nose further over the wheel, and I decided he was intoxicated. But, do you know, he was just as sober as he could be, and he said the automobile 'skidded.' At any rate, we smashed into the sidewalk. The whole right side of my head was bruised, and I had to get out and walk to the university. I never was very fond of automobiles, and now that their little peculiarity of 'skidding' nearly cost me my right eye I shall leave them strictly alone."

SIR CHENTUNG LIANG CHENG.

Adolphus Busch, the multimillionaire St. Louis brewer, who, with several members of his family, has started on a European trip, hopes to benefit his health by the visit to the old world. Mr. Busch was in San Francisco at the time of the earthquake about a year ago and was thrown out of bed by the shaking of the hotel in which he was stopping received. It was a shock to the rich brewer in more than one sense of the word, and his health has suffered from it since.
 Mr. Busch was born in Mainz, Germany, and came to this country at eighteen, engaging in the brewing of beer and in time becoming connected with other lines of business also. He is a generous patron of art and of charitable institutions and was active in the work of interesting the business men of his native Germany in the Louisiana Purchase exposition at St. Louis in 1904. Mr. Busch is quite democratic, and the saloon keepers of St. Louis hold him in great affection. A well known writer tells of going into a small saloon in the suburbs of St. Louis and falling into a friendly chat with the proprietor, a native of Germany. As the writer was about to leave the beer dispenser walked from behind the bar, took him by the arm, walked him to the end of the counter and stopped him. "Stan' right dair," he said as he stepped off a few feet, still facing his visitor. "Adolf Busch he stan' right vaif you is las' night 'tree hours."

ADOLPHUS BUSCH.

The popularity of Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) causes the public to take especial interest in the efforts of his daughter, Miss Clara Clemens, to attain fame on her own account. But Miss Clemens has chosen music rather than literature as her field, and she is ambitious to win a name for herself as a singer without regard to her father's eminence in literature. She has many of his characteristics, and her resemblance to him is considered striking by many. Miss Clemens studied music in Europe and has achieved popularity there as a singer. Since making her professional debut in this country she has been making steady progress toward popular favor. She possesses a rich contralto voice, and her singing gives evidence of the careful training she has received.

MISS CLARA CLEMENS.

Enrique Creel, the new Mexican ambassador, said at a dinner in Washington apropos of unpleasant truths: "Why should we ever tell them? They are always unnecessary, and how they wound! I have heard of an American countess or duchess—I forget which—who said to her noble husband fondly, 'You were embarrassed when you proposed to me, Percival, were you not?' 'Yes,' the man answered; 'I owed $900,000.'"
