COMPOUND INTEREST

The trouble with most advertisers is that they expect immediate returns of large proportions. One prominent advertiser illustrates the principle of advertising in this way:

"The money expended for advertising is the same as if placed at interest. The profits from the advertising are virtually the interest on the investment."

"The sums spent for advertising are properly chargeable to capital account because the resulting good will is something that has value, which, if the advertising has been properly done, can usually be sold for the face value of the investment."

"The rate of interest is determined by the skill with which the investment is made."

"Just as the quickest way to increase invested wealth is by compounding the interest, just so the quickest way to realize results from advertising is to compound the returns."—Advertising Experience.

Let Down Easy. Little Fred was looking at the stars, which seemed to him a very long way off. "Mamma," he said, "is heaven up there?" "Yes, dear," his mother replied. "And did I come down from heaven?" "Yes, dear." Freddy pondered a moment. "Did God let me down easy, mamma?" he said then, again looking up at the stars.—Lippincott's Magazine.

A SILLY MISTAKE.

But it Did Not Turn Out as the General Expected.

Beef was very scarce in Ladysmith during the siege, but General Sir Ian Hamilton, then a colonel, insisted that "horse is not half bad when properly cooked and when one is used to it. In fact," he said, concluding a discussion, "I have a joint cooked tonight which I hope you will all sample. Of course there's beef, too—tonight!" Every one at the table preferred the beef, with the exception of Colonel Ward and Ian Hamilton, who ostentatiously carried generous slices from the "horse flesh."

The dinner was nearly over when one of the servants whispered a communication to Ward. Up he sprang. "I'm distressed, gentlemen," he announced to the startled company. "A silly mistake has been made. Those joints were mixed up somehow, and you have been eating the horse! I'm really annoyed, but I hope you'll be convinced now that the meat is splendid eating! I'm sure you all seemed to enjoy it!" Glances were exchanged; mustaches were twirled. Nobody seemed ready with a response. Then a voice from the bottom of the table piped up: "Oh, don't distress yourself, Ward. I thought some mistake had been made. So I just changed those dishes as they stood on the sideboard. It was you and Hamilton had the horseflesh all right!"

Merely a Fable.

A frog and a cow stood together by the side of a mill pond. "Do you think," asked the frog, "that by expanding the air in my system I could attain your dimensions?" The cow chewed her cud reflectively. "It's a hypothetical question," she replied. "Well, you'll admit that hot air expands indefinitely. You also know that the epidemics will stretch a mile before it turns an inch. Now, if I take a large mouthful of air and hold my breath won't the heat of my body expand the air and stretch my cuticle until I am as large as you?" "I can't say," replied the cow. "Frame it differently."

The frog drew in a long breath and closed his mouth. Slowly his body bulged out. A passing flea buzzed an objection. With a loud report the frog exploded. Moral.—Even the smallest brain is subject to storm.—Puck.

Her Inheritance.

"I hear Mrs. Allalone is to marry the doctor who attended her late husband." "So she'll get her husband's property after all!"—Punch.

A Coveted Hat.

"I've gone every day this week," sighed little Mrs. Wallace, "to look at a perfect love of a hat in Smith's window. Such a darling white chiffon affair, Edward, with great big bunches of perfectly exquisite white roses and such heavenly lace! But the price—well, I wanted it tremendously, but I just couldn't afford to buy it."

"Perhaps?" "You're a dear, but, alas! There isn't any perhaps. Edward, I paid the cook this noon, and what do you think? She marched right down and bought herself that very hat!"—Youth's Companion.

The Latest.

Cook (entering the drawing room)—Mistress, will you be so kind as to play the piano a little? Mistress—Play the piano? What for? Cook—Well, you see, ma'am, my young man is in the kitchen, and he's awfully fond of music with his supper.—Lustige Blatter.

Modern Education.

"No Johnny is almost in high school?" "Yes; he's had splendid marks in whittling and beadwork and baking powder biscuits. If he were only a little more careful in sewing squares I shouldn't be a bit afraid about his passing."—Puck.

Housecleaning.

Now doth the careful housewife Lay in a stock of soap And start in with the labors Of housecleaning to cope. She yanks up all the carpets And pulls the pictures down, With grim determination To do the thing up brown. She takes the beds to pieces And puts them out to air. She polishes the tables. And duly wipes each chair. She washes all the windows And scrubs up all the floors And cleans off all the traces Of fingers on the doors. She starts in with the attic And goes down to the ground. She scrubs and sweeps and swashes And orders folks around. Meanwhile her hapless husband Wears a dissentient frown And says it's all blamed nonsense And takes his meals in town. —Somerville Journal.

VALUE OF GOOD ROADS.

Improving a County's Highways Bent Price of Land Up.

Bradley county, Tenn., covering 325 square miles of territory, had an assessment valuation equal to $9 per acre and an average tax rate of $1.05 per $100 when agitation in favor of good roads began there. After a long and earnest struggle the advocates of improvement were able to carry by a small majority a measure which provided for the issuing of bonds for $250,000, to be used for improving their public thoroughfares. Opponents of the scheme fought it in the courts and thus held back the work of advancement, but the courts decided that these bonds would be valid and ordered that they should be issued.

Warned by the hostility which had so delayed their work, the advocates of good roads began cautiously to carry out their undertaking in such a way as should make converts if not warm friends of their opponents. Competent engineers were engaged to plan and to direct the work, and the most efficient machinery was bought, every part of the work was done in the best way practicable and every care taken to get the best results for the money.

Before half of this $250,000 was spent all parts of the county clamored for additional money for road improvement of all their roads, and there was little if any opposition to providing for an issue of $150,000 worth of bonds for this purpose.

A result of this was that lands which could not find buyers at $8 to $10 an acre so long as the roads were either dry, dusty and rough, steep and badly drained or wet, muddy and stony were easily salable at $15 to $30 per acre even before the work of making the roads good was completed. Another result is that the county seat has gained importance as a manufacturing town and is consequently growing in population, in prosperity and in ability to pay a larger share each new year of the cost of improvement.—E. W. Perry in Good Roads Magazine.

TOURING ABROAD.

Much Money Spent by Travelers Where the Roads Are Good.

Thousands of dollars are spent by American tourists abroad every year that would remain in this country were our highways in better condition. Few people probably realize the great amount of money that travelers leave annually in foreign countries, where the beautiful scenery is made accessible by good roads, thus making touring a pleasure rather than a hardship. Over 2,000,000 people visit Switzerland annually, who, it is estimated, spend a sum aggregating $25,000,000. It is said Spain, Bavaria and Italy receive over $50,000,000 from their visitors each year. Good roads are to be found everywhere in those countries and are kept in the best of condition, making touring delightful. Every point is easily reached, and much money is spent by the tourists in towns and villages visited.

BAD ROAD FOR TOURISTS.

Good Roads Magazine says that while some of the finest scenery in the world is to be found in America, the fact that we have not yet built roads to make it accessible to tourists results in a great loss each year to this country. So much value is attached to securing the patronage of tourists that foreign governments spend vast sums in improving their roads as an attraction.

Road Maintenance.

Some have an idea that the permanent roads, so called, will or ought to last forever without any repairs because they cost so much to build. With that same kind of reasoning we would have a right to expect that a modern thrashing machine that costs several thousand times as much as the old fashioned flail ought to last forever without a cent expended for repairs. And that, while a violin that costs $3 has to be tuned and have new strings, one costing a thousand dollars should never need new strings and should be ways stay in tune. A good road is worth, for business or pleasure, several times as much as a bad road, and some portion of this we can afford to expend in keeping it in good condition. The permanency of the road depends upon its being kept in perfect repair.

Keep Out of the Ruts.

Down in the eastern states the farmers have learned that it means money in their pockets to drive in different places in the road, and you will see them, when they notice a road beginning to rut ever so little, turn out so as not to drive in the same old wheel track. Michigan farmers haven't learned this yet. They like to get in a rut and stay there, but they'll soon see the folly of it, and then a whole lot of the expense of maintenance will be done away with. Another destroyer of roads is the narrow tired wagon. A law should be passed prohibiting the sale or use of wagons with narrow tires.—Horatio S. Earle, State Highway Commissioner of Michigan.
