IRONQUILL'S FRIEND.

Little Kansas Girl Who Will Get Pension From Colonel Ware.

Colonel Eugene F. Ware of Kansas, who used to be United States pension commissioner, who practices law and who writes poetry under the name of Ironquill when not otherwise engaged, recently applied for a pension. When he was passing on such applications from others, he refrained from obtaining one for himself. He said he did not wish to take advantage of the bounty of the government so long as he had plenty of means of his own. But since the passage of the service pension law he has made application for $12 a month, a sum which he is entitled to under the provisions of the law, and it has come out that he will not take it on his own account, but for the benefit of a little twelve-year-old girl, Miss Laura Ramsey of Topeka. She has a brother who is serving his country as a soldier in the Philippines, she wants to obtain a good education, and to further her amblition Colonel Ware, who knows her family well, decided to ask for a pension and give it to her. The Ramsey and Ware families were neighbors, and a strong friendship exists between Colonel Ware and Miss Ramsey's brother Norman, who fought with Funston. Colonel Ware wrote a poem about him, the first lines of which read:

I have got a wealthy neighbor
Who is living without labor,
Who has cash and bonds and stocks and
Asks me out to dine.
And I have another neighbor
Living by the hardest labor,
Who's got a Twentieth Kansas boy out
On the fighting line.
There's no fun in being weary,
But if you should put the query
Which of those two people's places would
You take? Well, I opt,
Not the man that's got the money,
But the man that's got the sonny—
Got the sporting, rip-roaring boy down
On the fighting line.

LADY COOPER.

Sister of James Henry Smith May Be Richest of Women.

The death of James Henry Smith in Japan while on his wedding tour made his sister, Lady Cooper, wife of Sir George Alexander Cooper, Bart., a figure of international interest. If she should inherit a considerable sum from her brother's estate, it would probably make her the richest woman in the world. She is already wealthy. She was Miss Mary Emma Smith, daughter of George S. Smith of Evanston, Ill. There were several brothers and sisters, but the two older children, James

LADY COOPER.

Henry and Mary Emma, were favorites with their father's cousin, the rich reclusive, George Smith, known as "Chicago" Smith, who, though the owner of much property in this country, resided for many years in England. He took charge of the expense of their education and when he died left them the bulk of his fortune. It is supposed that James Henry and his sister each received about $50,000,000 from the great estate of their father's cousin, James Henry Smith subsequently became a figure in New York society, being known as "Silent" Smith on account of his aversion to loquacity about his affairs. The sister married in 1887 Sir George Cooper, who was a hard-working country barrister when his wife inherited her millions from "Chicago" Smith. The change in his financial circumstances caused him to give up the practice of law and adopt the life of a country gentleman. Sir George and Lady Cooper have two sons and one daughter. Should any large portion of "Silent" Smith's estate go to Lady Cooper it would, with her original inheritance of $50,000,000, put her ahead of Mrs. Hetty Green and Mrs. Anne Weightman-Walker in the ranks of rich women. An interesting phase is added to the situation by the possibility of a posthumous heir to the late "Silent" Smith.
