Harriman's Observations.

Little did Klamath think when they were filling the air for miles around with Harriman lauditory that he would go to Sacramento and give them the horse laugh, and tell the people there that the country was so sparsely settled that a railroad wouldn't pay, and that it was no funny thing to shovel snow six months in the year.

If Mr. Harriman had gotten a little farther off the side of the Cascade mountains he would have seen a string of beautiful valleys extending from down into California clear to Prineville, and beyond. This chain of valleys is continuous, being connected mostly by a stream cutting through the low divide that separates them. And here he would have found people. Prosperous farmers and stockmen, beautiful farms, gardens an i thrifty orchards growing every kind of fruit to enter the Senate from New York. adapted to a temperate climate-and he would not need to shovel snow, either. And here he could have seen need of transportation facilities. He could have seen good roads, hotels to stop at when night came, towns strung along at convenient intervals, tele graph and telephone lines-already built-and every convenience , he could wish for, except a puliman the footbills of the snow-capped Casthe wonderful country this side of his route as a polar bear. Had he ventur ed out of the mountains and discovered the rich and beautiful chain of Cascades nearly the entire length of cipal government line, and keeps busy. siderable distance into California, he ordinance restricting the speed of the same to be published for at least remarks about Oregon that he did in his speech before the National Irrigation congress, which he attended in Sacramento, and the portion of Eastern Oregon that is deserving of more consideration would not have been marks whose observations had not in- gambiers. May-be his opinion will spired him otherwise. We refer to what he says is read over all the world, and because he can do great things, when he thinks conditions warrant.

These remarks are pleasing to The Examiner, as they are prophetic, and can have but one meaning; that President Roosevelt desires to have charge of the construction of the Panama

Several months ago The Examiner expressed a desire to have Theodore Roosevelt take charge of the canal and push it to completion. This was at a time when the country was maping out a course for Mr. Roosevelt when his term as executive should expire, and the prevailing desire was for him
