MEASURING LAND.

Convenient Way of Finding Distances on the Farm.

The farmer often wishes to know the distance from one point to another on his farm. It may be that he wishes to build a new fence or replace an old one. He may wish to know the distance from a spring of water to his house or barn. Here is an easily constructed and useful measure, described by a writer in Farm and Fireside:

Take two boards or round sticks seventy inches long and fasten them firmly together at the center.

When this is rolled over the ground like a wheel, each revolution measures one rod.

Celery Blight.

The disease known as blight or leaf spot, which is caused by a fungus, is very prevalent and destructive. It makes its appearance at any time, usually after the plants have been set in the open field, and many acres of celery are annually destroyed as a result of its development.

The first visible indication of the disease is in the form of grayish spots upon the leaves, changing to a brown or burned appearance in a day or two. If conditions continue suitable to the development of the disease, it will spread to all parts of the plant, the stems will droop and the entire plant assume the appearance of having been scalded.

The heart of the plant will continue to throw up new leaves, but when once badly infected it never sufficiently overcomes the disease to produce a marketable product. When this disease makes its appearance, it is already too late to attempt to eradicate it, as much of the injury has been done before the existence of blight is perceptible.

Under favorable conditions spraying has in many instances proved beneficial in checking blight. Bordeaux mixture and ammoniacal solution of copper applied at intervals of ten days to two weeks will serve a good purpose.

Severe loss from blight is noted only where large quantities of celery are grown and handled together, and the farmer or amateur horticulturist will not as a rule be troubled if the plants are kept in a vigorous condition throughout the entire period of their growth. This may be greatly facilitated by partially shading the plants up to the time when they are set in the open field and by planting the crop on land that is rich enough to keep up a rapid and uninterrupted growth.

The most satisfactory shade for the plant bed consists of a screen made of plastering laths, with openings between the laths. The size of ordinary hotbed sash is the most convenient for these screens, as they can then be placed on top of or in place of the sash.

Celery blight generally appears during or immediately after a period of sultry weather, when the atmosphere is filled with moisture and the nights are warm. Bright sunshine and a clear atmosphere during the day, with cool nights, are favorable for the prevention and control of blight. Any check in growth will so weaken the plants that they are liable to be attacked by diseases. On the other hand, if the plants can be kept in a vigorous growing condition during unfavorable periods they will be in a much better condition to withstand diseases. Owing to close selection and constant in-breeding the self-blanching varieties have become constitutionally weakened and suffer more from disease than do the harder green sorts.—W. R. Beattie.

Matters That Interest You

Your local paper is a necessity to you, financially and socially. But a NEWSPAPER OF GENERAL CIRCULATION, containing the latest news of the world, is equally necessary to you. The "up to date man" will provide himself with these two essential features of progress.

IN THE TWICE-A-WEEK SPOKESMAN-REVIEW, Spokane, Wash., will be found the very latest news of the world, its matter including information on politics, commerce, agriculture, mining, literature, as well as the local happenings in the states of Montana, Oregon, Idaho, Washington and the province of British Columbia. In addition, its columns for women, its popular science articles, its short and continued stories, its "Answers to Correspondents" and "Puzzle Problems" combine to form a home newspaper that at $1.00 per year can nowhere be excelled.

ITS ADVERTISING VALUE. Perhaps you have something to sell—farm, a team, farm machinery. You wish to buy something. The best possible way to communicate with people who wish to buy or sell is by inserting a small advertisement in The Spokesman-Review. Farmers, stockmen, lumbermen and others take the TWICE-A-WEEK.

If you wish to reach business men and consumers, use the DAILY or SUNDAY SPOKESMAN-REVIEW.

Let the Young Wood Mature.

The success of many of our trees depends on their having well ripened wood. This ripening occurs in the latter part of the season and is necessary to help the tree stand the cold of winter. A second growth of the tree in the fall is injurious, as this new growth does not have time to ripen before cold weather sets in.

Breaking the Colt.

The old idea of "breaking" the colt is being abandoned. It is now realized that no breaking is required if the colt has been treated rightly during his growing period.—Kansas Farmer.
