

HIS OWN JAILER.

"Brown county, Ind., is without a doubt the most old-fashioned county in the Union," said Wash Fisher. "For six or seven years there was not a man locked up in the county jail until finally one morning a man was arrested for stealing a horse. After he was finally confined to the county jail the officials had to hunt around for a new lock, but then the question of who would be jailer came up. The village officials agreed that to employ a jailer would be too expensive, and they made a proposition to the man that he be his own jailer. He, of course, accepted and in the daytime would come out and roam around the town and promptly at 6 o'clock in the evening would retire to the jail and lock himself in."

"This continued for about three months, and at the end of that time his term was up. The officials breathed a sigh of relief. But their troubles had just begun. The man actually demanded that he be paid for his services as jailer. Not only did he want to be paid $2 a day as jailer, but he wanted 50 cents a day extra for cleaning and sweeping out the jail."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Burmese Sacred Cattle in Texas.
A herd of Burmese sacred cattle which Tom O'Connor, a stockman of Goliad, Tex., imported from India about two years ago has done so well that the variety will soon be found upon many of the ranches of southwest Texas.

A. P. Borden of Pierce, Tex., and other representative cattlemen of the gulf coast region made a study of the Burmese sacred cattle in India before the experiment of bringing them over here was tried. It was found in these investigations that the Burmese cattle were not subject to the splenetic, or tick, fever, which is the bane of the cattle of southern Texas, particularly when introducing stock from "above the line."

The claim is made that the Burmese as beef animals are the equal of any of the breeds of cattle commonly found upon the ranches. They fatten easily, and their flesh is of good quality. When crossed with other breeds the result is an improved animal both as to standard of weight and other important qualities, it is claimed.—Kansas City Star.

Called Him "Pop."

In the province of Lorraine, Germany, a boy twelve years old and his father went to the depot to make a journey by rail. They were looking about and talking to each other when the boy called the father "pop" instead of father. The station master overheard it and asked of the father:

"Do you allow your son to be so familiar with you as that? If so, then we must see about it."

He had father and son taken into court, and the father was fined 60 cents and the son sent to jail for three days for being too familiar with each other. Had the boy called his father "governor" or "old man," as some American boys do, perhaps he would have been hanged.—Brooklyn Citizen.

Good in Everything.

Samuel Gompers while attending the convention of the National Civic federation in Chicago got in an argument with a banker.

At the end of one of the banker's assertions Mr. Gompers retorted gayly:

"It is possible to say a good word for almost any state of things, isn't it? I remember once in a very untidy chophouse in Syracuse hearing a guest exclaim as he took up a soiled bill of fare:

"By Jove, what an excellent idea—samples of the various dishes glued to the menu!"—New York Tribune.

Reason For High Prices.

Professor Searchem was engrossed in the study of all things that crawled. To him a pin had but one purpose—to impale insects; tin cans but one use—to house worms.

"Professor," complained his young wife one evening, "how the prices of vegetables are soaring! Just think of it, $2 for this bushel of apples, and half have worms in them."

"But perhaps, darling," commented the professor as he strove to part the few remaining hairs on his shining head, "they are of a very rare species."—Harper's Weekly.

His Own Betrayer.

Dealers in "antiques" generally like to give their customers the impression that the things they sell are real and that there is absolutely nothing in the way of reproductions or imitations among their wares. There is one man in this line, however, who has a shop in Fifth avenue who unconsciously gives his business away by the sign on the front of his shop, which reads, "Antiques Made or Repaired."—New York Press.

A LITTLE NONSENSE.

Bright Idea of a Son Who Was to Take Over His Dad's Business.

The head of a certain Pittsburgh manufacturing concern is an old gentleman who built up his business from nothing by his own dogged and persistent toil and who has never felt that he could spare the time for a vacation. Not long ago, however, he decided that he was getting along in years and that he was entitled to a rest. Calling his son into the library, he said:

"Tom, I've worked pretty hard for quite awhile now and have done pretty well, so I have about decided to retire and turn the business over to you. What do you say?"

The young man pondered the situation gravely; then a bright idea seemed to strike him. "Say, pop," he suggested, "how would it do for you to work a few years longer and then the two of us retire together?" —Harper's Weekly.

More in His Line.

"I simply dote on soldiers. Are you a son of Mars?"

"No, but I should like to become her son-in-law."

Classics on the Turf.

"Do you think scholarship assists a man to pecuniary success?"

"I should say not," answered the patron of the races. "Half the time the bookmakers can't pronounce correctly the names of horses on which they win the most money." —Washington Star.
