

SPIRITUAL BEAUTY.

It Leaves a Whole Lump of Physical Homeiness.

While the desire for personal attractiveness is a proper one, we should remember that physical beauty is not the chief or only thing. It is a gift of God and should be cultivated by every legitimate means.

In general there are three wide spread theories in regard to this notion—first, that beauty is subjective and entirely within us; second, that it is objective and that it is due to the qualities of the thing which awakens pleasure within us, and, third, that it is halfway between these views and that it represents that thought which is aroused within us by the contemplation of a worthy thing. A subjective and an objective element both combine to make up the beautiful.

And this accounts for the seemingly separate tastes among different individuals, for as is well known, the mother never has anything but a beautiful child. It is the element of appreciation and love which rules here.

Love can make us color blind. Love, which hides the deformities and smooths the wrinkles of old age, is all prevailing.

There are, broadly speaking, three conditions which tend to the establishment and maintenance of personal beauty.

First of these is good physical health. It ought to be a matter of supreme importance for women to cultivate good health. And women of the present time are wiser than those of past ages in this respect, for they recognize the value of proper outdoor exercises and take part in them accordingly.

While doing this it is just as essential to avoid the harmful activities, such as dissipation, etc., which have a counteracting effect on the constitution.

Further, you cannot too absolutely turn your back on the numberless non-trivial medicines and liquors that are often the direct cause of a case of broken down health. Above all, live according to the rules of health.

A second condition of physical beauty is mental activity. A cultured and refined mind will reveal its healthful effect on the face.

Thus in many old women, where mentality no longer exists, it is not strange that we find a countenance that is ugly and unattractive.

The third condition of beauty is character, which will sooner or later reveal itself in the human visage. Every physiognomist knows this.

The young woman who indulges in a resentful disposition will show it in her face, while a pure, Christlike character will reveal itself with a light divine. In support of this assertion numberless cases could be cited.

These three, then, are the conditions of attaining personal beauty.

A USEFUL INVENTION

That Will Be Hailed With Joy by the Cook.

In the average kitchen there are never to be found enough dry towels when the process of dishwashing is at hand. The towel that ought to be ready for use is usually hanging on a rack, soaking wet. To obviate all this trouble an invention has recently been made that will be a joy to the housewife. It is nothing more than a band that fits around the boiler attached to the range. On this band are prongs placed at regular intervals on which the towels are hung. Coming in contact with the heat from the boiler dries the towel in a few minutes.

When the Nose Bleeds.

When the nose is bleeding never hold it over a basin or hold the head down in any way. This only causes further rush of blood to the broken tissues in the nose. The head should be held up and back, the flow being caught in handkerchiefs or cloths. One of the most effective and simple means of checking a nosebleed is to press on the upper lip. Near the under surface of the lip runs the artery that supplies the interior nasal passages where the ruptures occur. If this is pressed the flow of blood is mechanically checked, thus allowing the blood around the broken tissues to congeal and seal up the opening. If merely pressing with the finger does not succeed, place a wad of paper under the lip and fold the lip over it, holding down tight, says Woman's Life. Again, if this does not succeed and a drug store is near, get some adrenalin, saturate a piece of cotton with it and apply to the interior of the nose from where the blood flows.

The happiness of life consists in something to do, something to love and something to hope for.—Dr. Chalmers.
