HINTS FROM FASHIONLAND.

The Josephine Nightgown in Favor. For Stout Women.

A nightgown that seems to be growing in favor is the Josephine or empire model. This is particularly liked by stout women, who find extremely comfortable the band of heading just below the shoulders that is run with ribbons. The opening at the neck is generally the short, full strip of the regulation empire models, but occasionally it is arranged in a V.

The child's dress shown in the illustration is particularly good for wash materials, made, as it is, with shaped yoke. The gathers give a pretty fullness to the skirt, which is finished with an embroidered ruffle. These tub dresses are bound to shrink, and the tucks in the skirt may be let out from time to time as it becomes necessary.

Wash goods are generally thirty-six inches wide, and any number of different weaves may be had in good qualities for 15 cents a yard. In selecting fabrics for these dresses remember that stripes are only a degree less popular and are more becoming to slender children. It is a mistake to buy dark, muddy material with the idea that it will not show soil, but rather choose a clear cut design in a medium shade. Browns always run and never look well after the first washing, but blues, pinks and blacks on a white background launder nicely.

SNAPSHOTS OF THE MODE.

A Hint For Home Dressmaker—Square Cut Evening Gowns the Mode.

Here is a hint for the home dressmaker. A collar lining of taffeta should be cut so that the front part is on the straight of the material, and the curved part of the collar will then come on the bias.

All the new evening gowns are cut low in the neck, but the lines are most carefully studied to give the effect of being extreme, while in reality they are not. The square cut with straps over the shoulders is more fashionable this winter than the round cut with the sleeves falling off the shoulders; but, as a rule, there are tabs of embroidery or wings of lace that fall from straps in long, graceful lines.

Many of this season's skirts show some form of plaits, but the long, straight ones are more popular. The design in the accompanying sketch is particularly becoming to stout figures, having, as it does, the long, unbroken plaits in the front and yoke effect over the hips. In the back it is closed with an inverted box plait, and all the plaits are stitched to a considerable depth below the waist line. Voile, marquisette, chaille, nun's veiling and taffeta silk make serviceable and pretty separate skirts.

COMPOUND INTEREST

The trouble with most advertisers is that they expect immediate returns of large proportions. One prominent advertiser illustrates the principle of advertising in this way:

"The money expended for advertising is the same as if placed at interest. The profits from the advertising are virtually the interest on the investment.

"The sums spent for advertising are properly chargeable to capital account because the resulting good will is something that has value, which, if the advertising has been properly done, can usually be sold for the face value of the investment.

"The rate of interest is determined by the skill with which the investment is made.

"Just as the quickest way to increase invested wealth is by compounding the interest, just so the quickest way to realize results from advertising is to compound the returns."—Advertising Experience.
