SARTORIAL NEWS.

Handsome New Cloak—Big Trade For Hairdressers—A Useful Hint.

One of the handsomest of the new long cloaks is made of leather colored broadcloth. It is lined with pale coffee colored silk. It is loose, and the sleeves are very wide to admit of being slipped on over a lace waist. The trimming of this cloak consists of some bands of leather colored silk to match the cloak, while around the neck and down the front there is a very wide band of silk embroidered loose in the natural colors.

The winter hats require the hair to be arranged loosely, softly and in large quantities around the face. It will be a great season for the hat dresser and the manufacturers of false hair.

Many women are having their lace waists of last summer dyed to match their new winter costumes. The white blouses are becoming ecrus, blues, greens and browns. Dipping the waist at home may result disastrously, but it is always safe to send it to a reliable dyeing establishment.

The new tight Paquin skirt ordains that the petticoat must be a dream of loveliness, with lace ruffles and chiffon galore. It must have a perfectly fitting top made without a wrinkle, swathing the hips and back with the grace of a mermaid's skin.

There never was any suit devised for small boys more satisfactory than the Russian style. The long blouse is exceedingly becoming, and the trousers mean perfect freedom for active young legs. As illustrated the suit is made of pretty striped cheviot in shades of tan and brown, while the collar and shield are of tan broadcloth, banded with brown. JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

Skirts Still Plaited, but Gored Effects Newer—Lace and Fur.

Skirts of strictly tailored suits are almost invariably plaited. Again, there are many gored skirts, some showing ten or twelve gores, the seams either lapped or stitched or set together with black or colored pipings.

There is no method of trimming which can be depended upon to give more charming results and lend more style to a garment than soutache braid if properly applied.

Lace is used with fur in a number of attractive ways. Sometimes a band of rich fur alternates with a band of lace in the composition of a Paris muff. By the way, muffs are very large, and the new whim is to use half a dozen or so skins on a muff.

Gold chain bags have lost none of their popularity. Indeed, they seem to increase in vogue. The small sizes are not as much worn as the larger ones. They are carried by the smart woman in a number of sizes hung from a single ring of gold.

There is no garment that means more genuine comfort than the roomy bathrobe that can be slipped on at a moment's notice on arising from the bed and that is so comfortable for an afternoon nap. In the illustration it is made of cotton elderdown trimmed with bands of ribbon.
