

MENU COLLECTING FAD.

Miss Buttefisch Owns the Most Valuable of Dinner Cards.

Menu collecting is becoming quite a fad. The young girl or matron who shows the largest collection of menus from the aristocratic hotels, public banquets, private functions, complimentary dinners, etc., is the envy of all her associates. When the owner of the souvenirs has been a participant at the occasions symbolized by the menus and can relate instances concerning them she is all the prouder of her collection, as she has reason to be.

There is a disposition to exchange menus and collect them by any means possible. Some even go to the extreme of purchasing them from invalids and from hotels, while others buy them from the printers. It is said that on one occasion a little boy, who was the nephew of a lady of high social position, was invited to a banquet with the purpose of playing on a piano that taught chance to the guests.

The most interesting of the kind in the world is possessed by Miss Buttefisch. It is known as the "Buttefisch collection" and is large and valuable. It is known that it has been a place for the better branch of the New York Public Library. It includes menus of all the important bills of fare of the world every country. Many of them are of the most beautiful and different nature. The collection is classified and indexed, showing the result of an enormous amount of labor. It is interesting not only from the artistic point of view, but also to the student of gastronomy. It is different countries and in all recent sections of the world. It also gives an insight into the manners and customs of the different peoples. Thus it would be difficult to estimate the value this collection will prove to be a future reference.

A CULINARY WRINKLE.

The Art of Properly Cooking a Virginia Ham.

Select a ham, not too large, that has been cured at least two years. Remove the skin, scrub the ham with a stiff brush in cold water till perfectly clean. Then put the ham to soak, skin side up, in enough cold water to cover it to the depth of four or five inches, leaving it to soak twelve hours, changing water once.

In the morning remove the ham from the water; wipe it thoroughly clean with a coarse, damp cloth; put it in a big ham boiler, skin side up, over a slow fire, with enough cold water to cover it several inches; add a large Spanish onion, cut in halves, a large Mexican pepper, three bay leaves, a big lemon cut in halves, three table-spoonsful of tarragon vinegar and two table-spoonsful of elder vinegar.

Cover the kettle and let the ham cook very slowly till the fat bone may be easily removed by just touching it with a fork. Let the ham get nearly cool in the water in which it was boiled; then carefully lift it out, place it in a dripping pan, remove the skin carefully, score the fat over the top in diamond shapes, sprinkle with sugar, place it in a moderate oven and let it brown over the top. Then put it where it will cool.

Do not cut the ham until the second day after it has been cooked.

BEAUTY HINTS.

Long, straggling hairs which give an appearance of roundness to the eyebrows may be temporarily removed with tweezers, or permanently by electrolysis.

If the hair is hopelessly oily, good results can be obtained by powdering it occasionally. This must be carefully done, as if the powder is allowed to get on the scalp instead of being brushed thoroughly on the hair it will clog the pores. Not enough powder must be used to show, only sufficient to absorb the oiliness.

A dry skin will chap this weather unless massaged often with a good skin food of cold cream. The massage stimulates the oil glands to perform their natural work, while the cold cream supplies what natural oil is lacking. The face should always be carefully dried after washing it, as the water is drying to the face.

No dressing stand is complete without half a lemon put there fresh every day. A few drops of the juice much diluted makes an agreeable mouth wash; rubbed over the face, followed by an application of cold cream, it is bleaching. For the nails it is excellent and is used by thrusting the finger tips into the pulp. They should be washed at once and then lightly rubbed with cold cream.

Stringing Beads.

Many valuable beads are lost simply because they have been strung on silk or waxed linen threads. If you wish to have them properly strung, then get one of the thinnest catgut guitar strings and fasten them on it. They are safe, indeed, if the ends are securely fastened with the necessary gold clasps. This is the way jewelers string their valuable beads.

Aging Heroines.

"Sweet seventeen" is not much use as a character in a story which tries to deal in any real way with human nature. You need a "sensible thirty-five" and experience, and that is why the age of the heroine has grown so remarkably. It has not as yet gone over forty, but one never knows when it may do that.—Book Monthly.
