$1,250 Reward.

The Harney county live stock association, of which I am a member, pays $75 reward for evidence leading to the conviction of parties stealing stock belonging to its members. In addition I offer $500 reward for anyone who will bring me a horse brand or show bar on either or both jaws. Recorded in counties.

I will give $5.00 reward for information that will lead to the discovery of any horse branded with an old horseshoe brand on both jaws, placed as in the cut in this advertisement, with fresh triangle brand underneath the horseshoe. The triangle placed in such a manner as would cover up a bar on both jaws. Animals must be found in the possession of some person or persons.

COMPOUND INTEREST

The trouble with most advertisers is that they expect immediate returns of large proportions. One prominent advertiser illustrates the principle of advertising in this way:

"The money expended for advertising is the same as if placed at interest. The profits from the advertising are virtually the interest on the investment."

"The sums spent for advertising are properly chargeable to capital account because the resulting good will is something that has value, which, if the advertising has been properly done, can usually be sold for the face value of the investment."

"The rate of interest is determined by the skill with which the investment is made. 'Just as the quickest way to increase invested wealth is by compounding the interest, just so the quickest way to realize results from advertising is to compound the returns.'—Advertising Experience."

Advertisers get good returns on the amount invested in our columns. We reach the people.

Woman's World

MME. TETRAZZINI.

The Greatest Soprano Singer in the History of Grand Opera.

Mme. Luisa Tetrazzini, who made such a hit at Covent Garden, London, during the opera season of 1907 that she was hailed as having a voice as beautiful as that of Patti and a dramatic power superior to Melba's, was engaged at an enormous salary by Oscar Hammerstein to sing at his Manhattan Opera House in New York. The rival New York managers, Messrs. Contant and Hammerstein, discovered her before London took her up, but through a misunderstanding she signed contracts with both the American

MME. TETRAZZINI.

Impresarios. Later Mr. Hammerstein succeeded in securing her. She is a sister-in-law of Signor Campanini, the great conductor. Like Caruso, she has been her own instructor in the singing art. When asked how she learned her art the great singer replied:

"You ask me how to learn singing? Well, well, I should have to write you a big book, not a short article like this, and then perhaps you would be none the wiser, for no one can learn to sing as people learn to play games."

"In the very first place, it is a gift, for if you wish to be a singer you must have a voice. Everybody is not born with a voice, and some people who are have not the second vital qualification of a singer. I allude to what I can only describe as 'heart.' A voice and the heart to go with it—ah, there you have the complete singer!"

"But how often does this occur? I have heard so many vocalists with wonderful, pure, perfectly trained voices who sing the notes flawlessly, and that is all. There is no warmth, no passion, in their singing. It leaves one quite unmoved afterward. And this is solely because they have not been born with a 'heart.' The voice can be trained; the 'heart' never. It is there or it is not there."

"People have been kind enough to say that I was born with both voice and 'heart.' It is not for me to tell, but from my earliest days I have been steeped in music. I simply could not help myself—felt as though I had to sing or die."

"But as to how to become a singer I am afraid I cannot tell you. I do not think any artist who is a true artist—a singer, not a mere vocalist—could describe the way to do it. But this I can tell you—that nothing is done without real hard work, much practice and genuine enthusiasm."

Gowns Worth Altering.

Before attempting to alter a garment consider whether it is worth it. Ascertain what will be needed to make it presentable and what it will cost to get the necessary articles, what time it will take to make the alterations and how it will look when finished as well as for what length of time the garment would likely be useful after the changes are made.

Balance this against the cost, appearance and wear of a new garment of the same character and then decide. If it does not cost less than one-half the price of a new gown, require less than one-half the time to make the alteration that it would to make a new one and if it will not wear at least half as long as a new one, put it aside, as it is not worth the exertion.

Do not for a moment think this article is written to discourage the thrifty, and lead them into extravagance, because some of the prettiest gowns ever seen were made over and so skillfully arranged that the most suspicious could never have told just what it was that changed the whole aspect and made it new.

On the other hand, many women try to economize and spend more money, time and energy on a frock—and then have nothing—than would have been required to make two new ones. Therefore a study of each garment should be made before it is remodeled.

When once you have made up your mind that it is worth while to make the change, do not spoil the gown by buying a yard less of the new goods than is really needed, saying to yourself that it is only a "made over" and may be skimped. This is the poorest kind of economy.

In the same way do not try to save in the sewing. Rip it wherever it is needed and do not be afraid of a few extra stitches. If necessary rip the sleeves entirely out and the collar off.

New Lamp Shades Glisten.
Lamp shades are tremendously ornate and more and more glittering. A new ballet girl lamp shade, for instance, is decorated with as many Jew els as the most greedy of ballet girls could possibly desire. The shade is octagonal and is made of dull silk. On each of the eight panels is a painted ballet girl. This is not a reflection on the naturalness of the ballet girl's complexion, but merely an explanation of the nature of her coloring. All of the figure is painted except the skirt, which is made of tightly shirred chiffon.

The shade is finished with a broad band of gold insertion dotted with bright colored jewels, beneath which is a ruffle of gold lace. Around the top of the insertion are three strands of ruby beads which are looped all around the edge of the shade.

Equally glittering was a little shade meant for a large candle or small lamp. It was made of pale pink silk, over which was a fabric which might be described as pale pink cloth of gold, pink and gold threads being used in its composition. Garlands of ribbon embroidery decorated the shade which was edged with pink fringe and gold lace, the gold lace being trimmed with pink and lavender ribbon flowers.

A simple shade was made of flowered chintz, with a fringe of crystal beads.

Danger in Secondhand Rugs.

Liking for oriental rugs is often money in the doctor's pocket, in the opinion of a London physician, who says: "Most of the antique Persian rugs are collected in various bazaars in the east, and when you consider that the carpets are sometimes laid down in frequented places to be walked on or lent to the beggars or street vendors of the eastern cities you will see how necessary it is for them to be thoroughly cleaned. Before I have an antique rug in my home under all circumstances do I have it specially fumigated. In fact, I myself would go so far as to forbid the importation of eastern fabrics into any occidental country unless they had previously undergone some purifying process. Many of the otherwise unaccountable outbreaks of tropical disorders in Paris, New York and London are due to infection from oriental rugs."

Rothschild's Unfinished House.

People who pass Lord Rothschild's mansion in Piccadilly, says a writer in the Quiver, often notice that the end of one of the cornices is unfinished. One is likely to ask, "Could not the richest man in the world afford to pay for that cornice, or is the lack due simply to carelessness?" The explanation is a very simple yet suggestive one when it is known. Lord Rothschild is an orthodox Jew, and every plain Jew's house, tradition says, must have some part unfinished to bear testimony to the world that its occupant is only, like Abraham, a pilgrim and stranger upon the earth. The incomplete cornice on the mansion seems to say to all who hurry by in the streets, bent on amassing worldly wealth or going along with the madding crowd in the paths of folly: "This is not Lord Rothschild's home! He is traveling to eternity!"

A Helping Hand.

When the foreign missionary had concluded his talk, he made the usual appeal for contributions, however small, says Success Magazine. Coming up to the platform with several others, a small boy mounted to the level of the lecturer and, basting toward him, said: "Please, sir, I was very much interested in your lecture, and—" "Go on, my little man," said the missionary, encouragingly. "You want to help in the good work?" "Now, exactly, sir," said the boy. "What I want to know is, have you any foreign stamps you don't want?"

A Chocolatier.

A chocolatier is distinctly a woman's function, frequently taking the place of afternoon tea. The refreshments all have chocolate in some form. There is hot chocolate with whipped cream to drink, chocolate ice cream, chocolate cakes with white frosting or white cakes with chocolate frosting and chocolate boudans. As chocolate is apt to become cloying when no other food is employed, the sandwiches are provided of plain bread and butter, white rolls, stuffed or plain, and salted nuts fit in well with the chocolate selection.

To Brighten Paint.

When paints will soon acquire a shiny, dull look from the frequent rubbing that is necessary in this room, the use of soap only increases the dullness, especially if the paints are water based. A good plan is to boil one pound of soda in a gallon of water for an hour, then wash the paint with this branched water, and it will not only be kept clean, but bright and glossy.

A Dress Shield Hint.

It is not generally known, but worth remembering, that if dress shields are dusted with a good toilet powder before putting on the waist the result will be a refreshing feeling and a prevention of the disagreeable odor which usually attaches itself to shields in winter weather.

This Method is Particularly Valuable

when one suffers from chafing of the skin.

If one were represented by a woman instead of a man, there wouldn't be all this birthday fuss, anyway not at the age of 1908. She'd keep still about it or cut off a thousand years.

Let no man laugh when a woman sharpens a pencil. Instead let him remember those serious moments when he has tried to sew on a button.

A pinch of salt taken before meals stimulates digestion.
