COULD PAY HIS WAY.

Story of a Clubman Who Had Dined "Not Wisely, but Too Well."

The man who was going home from the club after dining "not wisely, but too well," had paid five fares during the first ten minutes he was on the street car. When the conductor came along again he handed out a sixth nickel and then a seventh as the man in uniform was returning to the back platform. A little later when the conductor went through the car he was given an eighth five cent piece by the clubman and then a ninth, but at this stage of the game his money was handed back to him.

"It seems to me you have paid your fare," said the conductor as he was about to see what the other passenger thought of the matter.

"No, sir," was the reply. "I insist on paying my way, sir!"

"Very well, then," said the other, repeating the nickel, with a shrug of his shoulders.

During the next fifteen minutes quite a number of people got on the car and the clubman managed to pay five more fares without a word of protest. The conductor hesitated, however, when the fifteenth nickel was handed him by the same man, and he gave it back with the remark, "I am almost sure you have paid your fare."

"No, sir, and I shan't do so favors from strangers!" angrily exclaimed the man. "I can pay my way, sir, and I propose to do so."

Another nickel passed between them, and then the one who had dined "not wisely, but too well," settled back in his seat and nodded sleepily. When the conductor passed through the car again, however, he sat up and handed over another nickel and said:

"Excuse me, sir—excuse me for not payin' fare."

"But I believe you have paid your fare, sir."

"No, sir! Don't think for moment, sir, that I'm tryin' to beat this company. I can pay my way, sir."

Before he came to his street he insisted on paying three more fares. Then as he was leaving the car he shook his finger in the conductor's face and said:

"Ductor, I'm goin' report you."

"What for, sir?"

"For lettin' me ride free, sir! Rule is no passengers allowed ride free, and I'll report you unless you collect my fare. Here it is, sir."

And for the twentieth time the clubman handed the conductor a nickel.—A. B. Lewis in Judge.

Of Her Own Accord.

The day the doctor called to treat little Kitty for a slight ailment it was only by the most persistent persuasion that he succeeded in getting the child to show him her tongue.

A few days subsequent to this the child said to her mother, "Ma, the doctor don't have to tease me to obey him any more!"

"Why not?"

"'Cause every time I see him going by the house now I stick my tongue out at him!"—Lippincott's.

At the Ball.

The Gent With the Feather—Ah, I thought it was you!

The Lion—Why?

"Because I have just been dancing with your wife."

"My wife? I didn't know she was here. What has she come as?"

"A lion tamer."

Perhaps.

De Style—I hear Lakeside is so forgetful he always forgets to put gasoline in his auto.

Gumbusta—I hear he bought a motor boat for his private lake.

De Style (absentmindedly)—Yes. And I suppose half the time now he'll forget to put water in the lake.—Harper's Weekly.

Her Interest.

"Why do you encourage that young man to quote poetry to you?"

"Because," answered Miss Cayenne, "the effort to remember occupies his mind so completely that he can't notice whether I am paying attention or not."—Washington Star.

What She Became.

Jack—There goes Mrs. Parsons. She used to be a decidedly pert girl.

Tom—Isn't she still pert?

Jack—No. Marriage seems to have tamed her, and now she's an expert.—Detroit Tribune.

To an Unfound Treasure.

You ask me why I love her.
She's no beauty, I'll admit,
And most girls are far above her
In the realms of sense and wit.

Her temper's rather—funny,
And her sweetness—all to learn,
And she hasn't any money
(Or economy) to burn.

She's no style, no education,
No accomplishments, nor could
She aspire to social station—
Folks don't even call her "good."

But she has one crowning glory
That for all things compensates.
You will doubtless doubt my story,
But—she always keeps her dates.—Judge.
