MODES OF THE MOMENT.

Jacquard Effects Among Novelties in Spring Materials.
 The showing of spring fabrics displays some very pretty Jacquard effects. In selecting a material for children's or misses' wear the jacquards are the most desirable of all figured goods. They make up well with little or no trimming and are so bright looking, and it is possible to find them in all kinds of materials, whether silk, cotton, collesne, poplin or mixed goods. Almost every color is represented, and the prices are reasonable. Where summer dresses are needed for girls, mothers will do well to look through the Jacquards.
 Rough silks are much used again this spring, and nothing is prettier for

A SUMMER SHIRT WAIST—3002.

A dressy suit than one of the new satin faced shantungs.
 The smart summer shirt waist will not be the waist with an exaggerated point in front, but it will be straight front. It will be the waist that goes round and round, with the back very slightly lifted and the front coming in its normal place. But it will be very small—the smaller the better. And the well waisted woman will have to diet if she is going to be fashionable. The illustration shows a waist of this style.

QUAINT CONCEITS.

Homemade Trimmings For Frocks.
 Colored Edging on Underwear.
 Homemade trimmings are sought for by exclusive dressmakers. The embroidered scallop finishes the edges of underwear and little girls' dresses. Bands with embroidered spots and an embroidered spider web motif in colored silks trim blouses.
 A novelty heaping the shop counters is the colored embroidery on white that is to decorate underwear for summer. Black embroidery on white is very striking, red and blue wash well, and pale pink, pale blue and lavender are exceedingly pretty and dainty.
 Silver acorns as a trimming for white satin ball gowns is very new. On one frock the girdle, sash and the skirt above the hem were finished in a single fringe of acorns. They were also put on in broken rows.

 Tan gloves rule for both dames and beaux. It is many a long season since so many shades of tan appeared in the glove world, and browns from the dull seal to café au lait are all favored.
 Three distinct styles prevail in waists—the tailored shirt waist, the blouse and the lingerie waist. The first variety is seen in the picture and is intended for wear under coats with tailored suits and with separate skirts for morning about the house. Linen, madras and both plain and striped muslins are suitable materials from which to fashion such waists. The sleeves are long, finished with three inch cuffs that are held in place with ink buttons.

SARTORIAL NEWS.

Negligee Corsets Approved by Experts—Linen Suitings.
 Negligee corsets, much used by women before the custom of wearing a corset is done, are seen in a new style and are trimmed at the top and down the front with a fine broderie. The price is $1.50.
 The linen suitings are, however, have a dangerous rival in the new pique fabrics which are strong bid for first place. Indeed, some manufacturers say that the present type of pique does not rumple and muss as unpleasantly as linen. In stripes and checks pique is particularly smart looking.

 Too much cannot be said in favor of trimming jumper waists like the one illustrated with narrow soutache braid. In fact, it is whispered that these braids will be given the preference over hand embroidery. While this is to be regretted from an artistic viewpoint, the busy woman will no doubt hail the fact with delight, for a whole waist may be braided in less time than it would take to do only a few inches of embroidery.

HERE AND THERE.

Smart but Expensive Linen Collars.
 Madras Shirt Waist.
 The handsomest and most expensive of stiff linen collars have Irish lace insertion used in a sort of conventional design. While these collars are very beautiful, they are less satisfactory than the hand embroidered collars, for the lace will not hold the starch, and the constant heavy washing soon tears the fragile lace.
 A good looking madras shirt waist seen the other day was of white up-figured stuff with straight white cuffs for linked buttons. It was given a novel touch by a front of four inch wide box plaits set side by side, each edged with an eighth of an inch band of apple green. Down the two central plaits were small pearl buttons set in groups of two several inches apart.

 A new freak is to wear rings on the index finger and the thumb, leaving the other fingers undorned.
 To prove that the tailored shirt waist has come to stay a little while longer at least, sets of jade, amethyst and other semiprecious stones are being shown in the shops. The sets include cuff links, studs and scarfpins and may be had in almost every design.
 With the vogue of the separate skirt comes a radical change from the plaited models that flare at the bottom to the clinging serpentine effects that can best be obtained by a circular cut. In Paris these skirts are worn so scant and tight that they show the form to an extent that is really immodest, but for the American woman they have been pleasingly modified, and a variety of styles in panel, plaited and tucked effects are shown. The gored circular seen in the cut is one of them.
