A FINE ORATION

One of the most eloquent and patriotic orations we ever listened to was delivered in this city on the Fourth by W. Lair Thompson of Lakeview.

The Examiner regrets exceedingly its inability to publish the address in full, because of the fact that Mr. Thompson speaks from notes only. Not knowing this the editor took no notes, and can only give a brief outline from memory.

In opening the speaker referred to the fact that in all this broad land, in every hamlet, village and city, in every part of our island possessions, and wherever Americans congregated in every part of the world, wherever "Old Glory" floats, as with one common impulse, imbued with the same patriotic thoughts, were the people celebrating this, our Independence Day, and glorifying the fathers who gave us our liberties, and who laid the foundations for our great and prosperous nation.

The speaker sketched the history of the causes that led to the founding of the Thirteen Colonies in most cases due principally to the desire of some of the best blood of England, the Pilgrim Fathers, the Huguenots of Spain and the fighting liberty-loving people of Ireland, to escape religious persecution, and to be able to live and worship according to the dictates of conscience. Inspired with a love for liberty, filled with lofty hopes, and thrilled by the ambitions wrought from a worthy purpose, they braved the dangers of the sea, and settled in the midst of the most savage surroundings, under conditions that brought out the spirit of independence and self reliance in the minds of the Colonists, and in their children, which later made itself manifest in the revolution which separated them from the Mother Land, and gave to the world this Republic, the highest type of government the world so far has known.

The trials endured, the fortitude displayed, the courage and bravery with which those few people fought against tremendous odds for their rights, wherein they achieved their independence, and established a new form of government. So well was the work of these men done that the poor, struggling, undeveloped Thirteen Colonies that then became the Union, have now grown into forty-six great, wealthy and prosperous commonwealths. The fringe of civilization then thinly bordering the shores of the Atlantic has from purchase and annexation, been extended from ocean to ocean, and our population has grown from 3,000,000 to 90,000,000 and is now growing greater with each passing year, both from the natural increase and from immigrants from every clime and country, all eager to receive a share in the blessings of peace and plenty accorded all who rest under the shelter of our beautiful flag. The flag now floats over a great area of the earth, covering as it does the broad domain, compact and self-contained, of our forty-six states. Besides the Union we have Alaska, purchased from Russia, with its fisheries, its timber, coal, oil and mountains and valleys filled with precious minerals of undreamed value. Hawaii, the gem of the Pacific, of masterful strategic and economic value, acquired by peaceful annexation, the Philippines, Porto Rico, Guam and our protectorate of Cuba, from Spain, Samoa from England and Germany. All priceless insulator possessions, which have lifted this nation into the proud position of a World Power.

The wisdom of the founders of the republic based as it is upon the equality of man, resulted in the formation of three co-ordinate branches of government, the legislative, the judiciary, and the executive, each supreme in its own department, each forming a check upon each other, and uniting in one harmonious whole, making the United States a republic of the highest form of civilization. Its history goes to show, and has proved, that "a government of the people, by the people, and for the people" is the best of all types of government. Under the constitution the people are free in thought, act, and speech in their personal, political, and religious opinions.

In mentioning the wars of the nation from the Revolution down to the Spanish-American war, he paid a special tribute to those who fought for principle, and who had the courage of their convictions, whether in right or wrong, to battle well and valiantly for their convictions. He showed that the Fathers of the Republic had worthy sons to perpetuate the spirit of independence even though those convictions carried them headlong into the throes of a civil war such as the World before had never seen, a gigantic struggle of Titans, in which both sides emerged covered with glory into a re-united country with but one flag. That since those terrible years, all differences had been healed, and the Blue and Gray re-united, had shed their blood side by side in the Spanish-American war, and that, as a result there was no South, no North East or West, but one grand, united country!

The speaker emphasized the truth that, great as had been the rise of the country during the past 132 years, the 20th century would witness the true life of the American people; that theirs would be a life of peace and industry devoted to the upbuilding and conserving what had been secured for them by the blood and sacrifice of their fathers; that theirs would be a commercial era, which more and more would make this nation a power for good in the world.

In closing Mr. Thompson spoke enthusiastically of the coming greatness of this Great Inland Empire, soon to come into its own, and said that, great as has been past progress here in wresting our present advantages from the primal order of things, our resources of farm, ranch, pasture, orchard and garden, were as yet only partially developed, and that with the coming of railroads now warranted and demanded, conditions for the better would take place in an almost undreamed of way. Throughout the oration the speaker held his audience in closest attention, being frequently applauded, showing that he was closely in trend with the sentiment of his audience.

The Examiner will have to be content with this brief and inadequate synopsis of the really brilliant effort of Mr. Thompson; but it gives notice that hereafter when occasion requires it will give fuller account of the able gentleman's addresses.

NOVEL FAIR FEATURE

An entrance such as no other World's Fair ever had for its gaudy boulevard has been planned for the Pay Streak at the Alaska Yukon Pacific exposition, which will be held at Seattle in 1909. Totem poles and a modern adaptation of the architectural style of China and Japan will constitute the principal features of the entrance. The Pay Streak is the name of the amusement avenue of the Pacific World's Fair, corresponding to the Midway at Chicago, the Pike at St. Louis, the Trail at Portland and the Warpath at Jamestown. The approach to the Pay Streak will be in the form of exact reproductions of famous totem poles. There will be a line on each side of the avenue. At night the eyes and grinning mouths will be illuminated by electric lights, which will produce an odd effect. The actual entrance will be a grand archway of a combination of Japanese and Chinese architecture.

MAY BE IN THE CABINET

The Portland Telegram of recent date says that United States Senator Charles W. Fulton, had arrived in Portland and at once departed for his home in Astoria. Senator Fulton did not desire to discuss Oregon politics at this time as he has not placed himself in touch with conditions since he returned to Washington after the primaries. Concerning the rumor that Fulton may be given a place in Taft's cabinet, if the latter is elected, the senator declared this was no time to talk on such a matter, and further that he was too poor to consider or accept a cabinet position.

Senator Fulton is enthusiastic over the nomination, and was one of the most prominent figures in the republican national convention, and a right hand man of Taft. In the opinion of Fulton there is no danger of Bryan defeating Taft in November.

INJUNCTION NOT GRANTED

The Herald says that in accordance with the order of the County Court declaring the county prohibition under the local option law the doors of all saloons in Klamath County were closed at midnight last night. Large quantities of liquor were sold at wholesale before the time for closing the doors, and many of those who are fond of their little nip laid in a supply that will last for several days. All of the saloon men and the parties employed by them are on the streets today.

A few of the places remained open to sell soft drinks and cigars and will continue this kind of business at the old stand.

The petition for the writ of review will be heard by Judge Benson on July 7th, but in the meantime the order for prohibition is in effect.

SHOULD BE REPRESENTED

The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition to be held at Seattle in 1909 is just now attracting attention, not only in the Union but throughout the world, and promises to rival the Portland exposition held some years since. The fair will afford an excellent, indeed unrivalled, opportunity for advertising the resources of this county, and its opportunities for the home seeker, that should be at once recognized by the land owner and real estate men of this section.

Oregon Commission, appointed to look after Oregon's interests at that exposition, desire an exhibit from every county. Lake County should have an exhibit there and it should include a complete and representative collection of all grasses, grains, fruits, vegetables, etc., grown on our irrigated and non-irrigated lands.

It would also be well for the mining men of the county to send in an exhibit of the ores of the county, which will be the means of interesting outside capital, as especial attention will be given mining matters at the Exposition.

GOOSE LAKE & SOUTHERN

FILES RIGHT OF WAY

The Lassen Advocate says that there has been filed in the United States land office at that place a right-of-way map of the Goose Lake and Southern Railroad from the state line south to Alturas, covering a distance of a fraction over 59 miles. An inspection of the map which is a finished piece of work, shows that the proposed line hugs the east shore of Goose Lake from its northern extremity almost its extreme southern point. The application is signed by William Hood, as chief engineer, and E. E. Calvin, as president. A particularly noticeable feature of the line is its directness, in one instance a stretch of something like eleven miles being as straight as rule can make it.

Portland is rejoicing over two events that lead to her future greatness. One is the success of the new jetties at the mouth of the Columbia river, recently completed by the government providing a channel over the bar 26 feet deep and 3000 feet wide, thus removing one of the chief obstacles to her greatness as a sea-port. The other is the completion of the railroad bridge across the Columbia, at Vancouver, insuring quick and easy transportation north and east. Another thing necessary to complete her ambition is direct rail connection with Lakeview, and its tributary country. The latter is a consummation devoutly wished here and in which we believe all the people of Portland will join us.

The Eugene Register rises to remark: Oregon will have a bumper apple crop this year. All of which goes to show what close attention to the fruit industry will do toward bringing profitable returns.

Wants to Attract Settlers Harney is to make strenuous efforts to advertise its resources. Its boosters should know that one of the best ways to accomplish much good is to use the local press, and to encourage the publishers in their labor by increased patronage. Take an interest in the work by paying for extra copies and mailing them regularly to eastern friends. The papers advertise your advantages week in and out. It is certain that every public spirited newspaper man gives the public he serves more than value received for every dollar turned his way. And this rule holds good in all communities wishing to attract settlers.

Some Prohibition Joy A big wind came rolling over from Klamath way Saturday evening filling everybody's eyes and noses with dust. It was an unusual occurrence, and was not accounted for, until it dawned upon us that it was due to the dust kicked up over in the next county by the prohibitionists, who took this way of exhibiting their joy. But they could have kept their dust at home to our comfort. The Examiner knows we are "wet", but not wet enough to lay all that dust.

Put Bunting on Sucking Colt The patriotic impulse developed good and strong here on the Fourth. One man went so far as to wind bunting around a sucking colt, that was following the team around town. Every business house was festooned with the red, white and blue, and all along Water street, the principal business street, evergreen trees were set, all together giving the town a gala appearance.

Had Money in His Purse A man under the influence of liquor the other night, not being able to find a bed, laid down in the street and went to sleep. He had $300 on his person and had told of it. But no one molested him. He said no one could get it from him as he would awaken if it was tried. No one tried. But the Marshal came along, and woke him up, whereupon the man said: "Well, you could have got my money that time!"

Smiles and Squalls BY "THE VERDANT ONE"

A Chicago woman lawyer has just won a big suit involving an estate of $3,000,000. Now she is overwhelmed with mail offers of marriage, so it appears there are creatures in pants who are willing a woman's brains should earn them a living? But naturally this woman of brains says: "nit!"

The house occupied by the brother-in-law and owned by Gallagher, chief witness of the graft prosecution in San Francisco, was dynamited last week, and four killed and three badly injured. This the third attempt to kill Gallagher in this way. If the vigilantes of old were on deck the first inquiry as to such devilishness would be: "Who benefits by this?" Then there would be something doing—and the right persons would be reached, and justice, sure and swift, would be dealt out!

The French government has determined to own all the railroads of that country. "De worl' do move," as Brer Jaesper once asserted!

A new diamond field, ten miles square, has been found in German South Africa. Aha! Our "Uncle" got ours some time ago. He then said they would soon be "sheepier." And now we believe him!

A janitor in a neighboring school threw up his job the other day. When asked what was the trouble he said, "I'm honest and I won't stand being slurred. If I find a pencil or a handkerchief 'bout the school I hang it up. Every little while the teacher or some one that is too cowardly to face me gives me a slur." "In what way?" he was asked. "Why, a little while ago I saw written on the board 'Find the common multiple.' Well, I looked from celler to garret and I wouldn't know the thing if I met it on the street. What made me quit my job? Last night in big writin' on the black board it said, 'find the greatest common divisor.' Well, I says to my self, both them darn things are lost now and I'll be blamed for swiping em, so I'll quit."

WOOL SHEDS TO BE BUILT Wool Growers Getting Awakened to Their Own Interests

The wool men seem to be stirring in a way that betokens better prices for them, and that of course means more money for everybody. Looking forward toward this end, Chas. Sherlock has donated a lot containing half an acre adjoining the town for a location for wool storing sheds, so that the clip will not be exposed to the weather as has been the case in the past. Because of the past method of piling up wool out of doors, awaiting shipment or better prices, much complaint and reduction of price, has resulted, as the sacks became rotten, and wool was not kept in prime condition. When the buildings are completed, the wool will all be stored in one place, and when the clip is all in, the buyers can be notified to come and do their bidding. This plan will save the buyers much expense, and of course they will then be enabled to make better prices. It is a good idea, and will be satisfactory to both growers and buyers.

Eager Homeseekers

Outside interest in this section is manifested in receipt of mail enquiring for all lines of business as well as for farming lands. The Examiner receives dozen of such letters every week, and so do the real estate men. One of the latter received eleven letters Monday from every point of the compass, mostly enquiries for land.
