The Signal Gun.

[Original.]

When I was left a widow I took the only means of making a living offered me and went to Russia to introduce a typewriting machine, intending also to do copying. I hired a small room in St. Petersburg and advertised.

One morning a young woman came to my office and room and asked for employment, saying that she was a typewriter. She was about twenty-three years old, comely, but shabbily dressed. She seemed eager for work and offered in lieu of wages to take a commission on what work she would bring in herself. If there was not much in this for me to gain there was certainly nothing to lose. I engaged her.

The next morning she came to the office with manuscript sufficient to keep her busy for a week. She didn't ask what I intended to charge for the copy, but sat down at the machine and went to work. I found at once that she knew very little about typewriting. As to this she had deceived me, and I had a mind to send her away, but I didn't wish to lose the job she had brought in, and, as she said there was plenty of time in which to do it, I bore with her, showing her how to manage the machine, which was new to her. While doing this I noticed the whiteness, roundness and delicacy of her hands. I complimented her on them and noticed afterward that she persisted in getting them smeared with the ink of the ribbon and the dust and oil of the machine. From her hands I was led to notice her complexion, her figure and especially her foot, which was very dainty. Her ears, too, were small, a reliable token of breeding. Besides these features, there was a refinement of manner about her that did not accord with her cheap clothing. I told her she looked too aristocratic for her dress, and I was much puzzled at the way she received the comment. Instead of being pleased she seemed distressed.

Since she said there was more copy ready for her I worked evenings myself on the manuscript and at the end of the week it was finished. I made the charge 20 rubles, which she gave me before taking it away, and I handed her back ten of them. She seemed perfectly satisfied and the next morning was ready with more work.

She said she wished to work nights and to be near the machine rented a room in the same building as mine, in which she put a cot and a little cheap furniture. She cooked her meals in her room and after once being established there never left the building except at night.

One morning while I was typewriting I came upon a paper between the leaves of the manuscript. I handed it to the girl, and as I did so the blood left her cheeks, and she gave a little frightened gasp. She went on with her work without a word, but presently turned to me and said:

"You expect an explanation about the note. There is none. The secret is mine, but I am going to ask you to refrain from any mention of me or it to any one. Will you?"

"Certainly!" I said.

On another occasion she said she had a headache and went to her room. She had not been gone five minutes before, wishing to ask her something about a manuscript I was copying, I followed her. I turned the knob, but found it locked. I rapped, and after some time she opened the door. She was white as a sheet. I did not ask for an explanation, and she offered none.

I used to talk with her about the tyranny of the Russian government and contrast it with our liberty in America. She said that there was as much liberty in Russia as the people were fitted for and did not seem interested in American freedom. But one evening when we were together a complete change came over her.

"You have been very kind to me," she said, "and I am going to give you some advice. I know I can trust you, for you are an American. Besides, you have no reason to betray me. Leave this country as quickly as possible. A terrible struggle is about to begin which will last for many years. You cannot succeed here in what you have attempted. All these manuscripts I have brought are mine or my friends', and I have paid for every one of them. My father, a noble, is in Siberia, and my mother died of grief at his imprisonment. I am one of the workers in the revolution about to be inaugurated, and the police are searching the city for me. Within a week the czar will bless the waters of the Neva. At that ceremony the signal for the coming strife will be given. Pack up your machines and ship them away at once and follow yourself as soon as possible. You must wait for a remittance? Don't wait for anything. Here is money to get you out of this country that will soon run with blood."

Thrusting her hand into her bosom, she drew out a roll of bills and gave them to me. I was too much appalled to even take them, but she put them in my hand and sped away. As soon as I could recover from my astonishment I did as she had bidden me, but did not get away before my employee's room was forced by the police to find the bird had flown.

Three days after my departure I read the news that at the ceremony of the blessing of the Neva a cannon loaded with shot had been fired into the czar's palace. It was the signal gun of revolution.

The Secret of a Beautiful Face lies in keeping the skin protected as well as cleansed. Just washing is not enough—that only leaves the delicate surface more exposed to the irritation of dust and germs; to merciless attacks of sun and weather. After washing, apply Robertine and experience its delightful refreshment. You will admire the line-less softness it imparts to face, neck and arms. It not only stimulates a radiant glow, but protects the skin from becoming coarse. Prevents burning, tan and freckles.
