TO RIDDLE GUESSER.

By BENJAMIN NICHOLSON

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"Don't tell me you can't make him propose!" snorted Mr. Poole, turning r scowling face on one of his daughterwho was primping before a mirror. "You don't go at it right. Ger blar he a corner and then look at him just as much as to say, 'What are your linestions?"

"But how are you going to get him in a corner?"

"There are bundreds of ways, Ask him what he built his new house for and keep on asking questions about it till you get him in a place he can't squirm out of. I know men are dull and mighty provoking at times, but you've got to be patient and help them slong."

"Since you think it is so terribly easy to corner him I'll just give you a chance to do it." snapped Miss Leah. "I see him coming through the gate now. I'm going to run upstairs. Tell him I haven't finished dressing."

"Howdy, Mr. King? Come right in Take off your overcoat, draw a chair up to the fire and make yourself comfortable. Leah will be down shortly. She's not quite through frizing her hair, Right cold today, isn't it? How's he folks?"

"About as well as common. How're ven all?"

"We're all able to be up and stirring around. Ma's complaining, as usual, but not much the marter with her, I guess. I see you got the last coat of paint on your new house. Must have been pretty cold up on the top of that ladder, wasn't it? Says I to Leah the other day when I got home, 'If Mr. King doesn't catch his death of cold it'll be a wonder to me?

"Would you believe it? She got that hadly scared about you that she had er ma make up a batch of her celestated cold cure and then asked me

"WILL YOU IVE HER TO ME FOR MY WIFE?" to take it over to you. But I told her and wouldn't think of taking anybody else's."

"But I didn't get a cold."

"Lenh will be mighty glad to hear that. 'Pa,' says she the very inst thing before she went upstairs, if Mr. King's got a cold holler up and tell me, because I'm so worried about him." "

"But I didn't get a cold."

"That's too bad-er-1 mean, of course, It's too bad that I went and scared Leah so. But we were talking about your new house. What was your terrible rush to get that last coat of paint on? Something unusual going to happen?"

"Not that I know of. I just wanted to get through. And now at last I'm beginning to feel as if a were ready to.

"Don't you need something besides a house? See if you can't think of something you're still short of." "I can't say that I can."

"Something that stays in the house." "Well, I got my ma to make out a list of the things she thought I'd need, and I turned it over to Burckey and had him fill it out."

"Maybe the thing I have in mind is not to be had at Burckey's."

"I must say if it can't be bought at Burckey's It must be something unusual. But don't tell me what it is. I'm a terrible fellow for guessing riddles and solving puzzles and such like. I never heard tell of a riddle that I couldn't guess."

"Well, a lot of men have got gray rying to solve this one. But dive in; maybe you can. I don't want to discourage you."

"Is it found in most houses?" "No, not all. Old bachelors seem to think that the earn get along without them. Whenever they do have one around it's an ugly old thing. I almost said secondhand, but caught myself just in time." "I reckon you have one?" "Oh, yes, four. I got one before I started housekeeping." "Now, that's interesting! Which room do you keep it in?" "For twenty years I tried to keep it In the kitchen, but as I didn't seem to make any headway I gave up trying. I'm just as liable to find mine in the parior as anywhere else." "Is it a bootjack? I don't think

Burckey keeps bootjacks." "Well, if a bootjack is supposed to make life easier for a man, then it's like one in that respect, but it's not a bootjack nor a cook store, though it is supposed to stand around a store a good deal and is like one in that it gets pretty warm at times."

"I reckon it couldn't be a coffeepot. for Burckey keeps them I believe you said it made life easier for a man?"

"No, I didn't, I said it was supposed to. But the thing I said that was most to the point was that I got one before I started housekeeping and that now I've got four. Do you know, I've been expecting f r some time that you were going to ank me if I wouldn't give you one so that you could begin housekeeping right."

"That's another good point. It' something that you'd give away, so recken it can't be worth so very much I'll guess it yet: Now, you see if don't!"

"Just to encourage you a little, don't mind saying that, while I wouldn't sell it for any money, i'll give It to you just as soon as ever you ask me for it."

"Is it a stove lifter?" Mr. Poole pushed a good sired handful of whiskers into his mouth and began to coew them angely. "New, let me put all these points to gether," said Mr. King. "It's some thing that can't be bought at Burck s, yet it's found in most every house. It's supposed to make life easier for a man and is like a bootjack in this respect. You tried for twenty years to keep yours in the kitchen, but couldn't do it, though it does stand around the stove a heap. It's something you won't sell, yet you'll give it to me just as quick as ever I ask you for it, and you've been thinking I was going to ask you for it. Now, if that's not a corker I'm no judge of riddles!"

"And you don't know what it is?" growled Mr. Poole. "Give me another minute or two I've got it! It's a coal scuttle!' "Not by a darned sight! A wife you blankety blank fool!" "Oh, oh and you'll give me Miss Lenh? Will you, Mr. Poole? Will you give her to me for my wife?"

The long cared burro, that hardy little animal that belped build the wonderful cog rullway up Pike's peak, is considered a necessity in the far west, but is something of a curiosity "way down east" in the New England states. There is a story of the burro and a man from Maine. Here it is: A wealthy Yankee went west last winter from Maine, leaving his family at home. His hobby was to collect quaint pieces of pottery, unique articles of furniture, bureaus, tables. desks and "whatnots." When he was ready to leave for home he found he had bought up several dray loads of curios. He chartered a car and loaded in his treasures, but there still was one end of the car that might be filled with something unique. Some one suggested that he buy a burro for his little boy to ride, which he did, and the "mountain canary" occupied the vacant space. The Yankee station agent back in Maine, when he began to unload the car, checked off each article on the bill of lading till he came to the burro. He was much puzzled, for he could not find this thing on his list. Finally be made an entry in the "remarks" column of his tally sheet as "One bureau short and one donkey over."-Kansas City Star.

Fruitless Plants.

The knowledge that the common white potato seldom produces fruit is so widely diffused that the barrenness of the plant causes no comment. Indeed, since the tubers in a measure function as seeds we have partially transferred the name to them. It is usual to speak of potatoes intended for planting as "seed potatoes." Real potato seeds may be found, however. if one searches the potato fields long enough, and from such seeds new strains of potatoes may be rified. The potato is not alone in its strange ways. Many other plants, of which the ground nut and filly of the valley are good examples, rarely produce seeds. It is noticeable that all such plants have other excellent and effilent means of propagation, and it may be assumed that finding one method requiring less effort than the other they have generally adopted it. When plants have more than one ners below ground, they usually subserve two distinct uses, those below ground serving to multiply the plant in its own locality and those above giving it a chance of gaining a foothold in distant lands.-American Botanist.

Old Sword Blades.

Rough as the fighters of old were, the inscriptions which they put on their swords often showed not only considerable poetic instinct, but sentimentality. "Faithful in adversity" is such a sentence engraved on an old sword of the seventeenth century. In a collection of blades of the sixteenth century are these inscriptions:

"I quarrel." "God give me speed that my foe be beat indeed." "With this defense and God's will all my enemies I shall still." "In battle I will let myself be used." "When I my sword uplift in strife, God give the sinner eternal life." "Trust in God, bravely war; therein your fame and honor are." "Your sim alone be God's great name. Who dares deny strike thou him lame." "Every soldier fine look on this sign and use his hand for God and the land." On blades from the eighteenth century are these inscriptions: "Nothing better in the world thou hast than to hold love and friendship fast." serve." "A good blade I. Who would deny let him meet me, and I will hold it will cost him or blood or gold."
