

BIRDS' TONGUES.

Why the Parrot is Able to Imitate Human Speech.

One of the government naturalists at Washington has recently gathered some fresh information concerning the tongues of birds.

Many people suppose that woodpeckers use their sharp pointed tongues as darts with which to transfuse their prey. It is true that the woodpecker, like the humming bird, can dart out its tongue with astonishing rapidity and that its mouth is furnished with an elaborate mechanism for this purpose.

Considering its powers of imitating speech, it is not surprising to learn that the parrot's tongue resembles that of man more closely than any other bird's. It is not because the parrot is more intelligent than the other birds, but because its tongue is better suited for articulation than theirs.

The humming bird's tongue is in some respects the most remarkable of all. It is double nearly from end to end, so that the little bird is able to grasp its insect prey with its tongue much as if its mouth was furnished with a pair of fingers.

THE ANT EATER.

A Harmless Animal That Will Fight Hard When at Bay.

A peculiar looking animal is the ant eater, which is closely allied to the sloth family. Its head is drawn out into a long, tubular muzzle, at the end of which is a tiny mouth just big enough to permit the exit of its long, wormlike tongue, which is covered with a sticky saliva.

This tongue is thrust among the hosts of ants with great rapidity, coming back laden with the tiny insects. To obtain its prey the ant eater breaks open the mounds, when all the active inhabitants swarm to the breach and are instantaneously swept away by the remorseless tongue.

The jaws of the ant eater are entirely without teeth, and the eyes and ears are very small.

There are several species of ant eater, the largest kind being about four feet long and having a tail covered with very long hair, forming a huge brush. The claw on the third toe of each fore limb is of great size and is used for breaking open ants' and other insects' nests.

Generally speaking, the ant eater is a harmless animal, but at times when at bay it will fight with great courage, sitting up on its hind legs and hugging its foe with its powerful arms.

The Perfumed Cloud.

The dentist's sleeve was smeared with a pale dust. He beat it with his palm, and a perfumed cloud arose.

"Makeup," he said, laughing, "the day's usual harvest of makeup. Why the deuce, to front the fierce white light of a dental chair, will women come to me with makeup plastered thick on their pretty faces? They all er nearly all do it. Their lips are reddened, their brows penciled, their cheeks rouged, and in a few cases the fine network of veins in the temples is outlined in blue. Peggling away at my teeth, I mop up all that makeup on my coat sleeve. I smear red over white noses, black over pink cheeks. Phew! Look out!"

And, brushing his cuff again, he heaped back to escape the sweet smelling cloud that filled the air.

Difficult Feats.

"Here are some extracts from a few modern popular novels," said an author as he took down a scrap book. Then he read:

"The way my pastor appeared at the manse door, his hands thrust deep in the pockets of his loose jacket, while he turned the leaves of his prayer book thoughtfully and wiped his glasses with a handkerchief."

"After the door was closed a stealthy foot slipped into the room and with cautious hand extinguished the light."

"Fitzgibbon lingered over his final remembrance when a gentle voice tapped him on the shoulder, and, turning, he beheld his old friend once again."

"The chariot of revolution is rolling onward, grinding its teeth as it rolls."

Greedy Little Salmon.

Little creatures may be very greedy and yet not be able to eat much because of their size, as was illustrated, for instance, in the case of a batch of about 20,000 little Chinook salmon that were hatched out at the aquarium. These young fishes, each about two inches long, would eat so much that their little stomachs fairly stunk out, and yet to feed the whole 20,000 took daily only one pound of liver and a quart of herring roe, both chopped fine.

An Exception.

"I think," said the merchant, "I'll have to fire your friend Poik. I never saw any one quite so lazy."

"Slow in everything, is he?"

"No, not everything. He gets tired quick."

Easy Enough.

"I cannot live but a week longer," said the man.

"Really? Well, now, how can you do on a diet of length of time?"

"Ze landlord fix on it, miss, not I."

They Take the Kinks Out.

"I have used Dr. King's New Life Pills for many years, with increasing satisfaction. They take the kinks out of stomach, liver and bowels, without fuss or friction."

MOVEMENT TO PROVIDE STORAGE FOR WOOL.

The American Wool and Cotton Reporter of Boston prints the following comprehensive editorial on the prospective growth of the wool storage warehouses to the west. As this is a topic of intense interest to Lake county and all of eastern Oregon, The Examiner takes pleasure in giving the subject wide publicity, and the more so, as it voices what this paper said some weeks since relative to the erection of wool storage barns in Lakeview. It is as follows:

Wool growers of the northwest range states have already felt the influence of the movement to hold western wool clips in storage warehouses provided by members of the national and local associations. This movement had its inception somewhat late in the present season—too late in fact to bring about all that its promoters had hoped to accomplish this year, but enough has been done to practically demonstrate the feasibility of the scheme and to greatly entice western wool interests.

The credit for this idea is largely due to Secretary George S. Walker of the National Wool Growers' association; and President J. A. Delfelder, of the Wyoming association, who succeeded in interesting a sufficient number of wool growers to establish a large storage warehouse at Omaha this year.

Accommodations were made for approximately 3,000,000 pounds of wool and from present indications, the Omaha house will at least approach the 4,000,000 mark this season.

A patron of this warehouse may receive the usual advances on his clip if he desires, without placing his business in the hands of the commission men, and is enabled to hold until in his judgment the market is ripe for selling.

The plan embraces a much larger scope than the mere element of storage, and will be fully worked out before another clip is to be handled. The idea of western growers holding their own clips, instead of selling during the shearing season or consigning, was not generally understood at the outset, and many wool growers were slow in taking up with the plan.

A not uncommon understanding was that this plan did not materially differ from the ordinary consignment method; others, with the seemingly inherent timidity of the sheep man, held aloof until some one else had given it a trial.

Now that it is quite generally understood, and its good effect already

You May Choose for Yourself Either "Hard Times" Or "Good Times" For it Has Come to be a Personal Problem with Each Business Man. The "hard times" are over, generally speaking. They are not over for those people who are content to have them continue. With the advent of fall activities in business will come to each merchant, to each man who is conducting a business, the opportunity to say a long good-bye to "hard times," or to cling to them a little longer. It is to be largely, a test of courage—the making of this choice. A test of advertising courage—mainly. The stronger business men will choose good times as a matter of course—and will proceed to make the choice effective by a campaign of real advertising. There will be better, bigger, more effective advertising done this fall than ever before. The arid-merchant will wonder "where the money is coming from to pay the bills." He will, in some instances, decide that he must not "take the risk." That will be HIS DECISION FOR "HARD TIMES" in preference to "good times," so far as he, personally, is concerned. Prosperity is now a personal question. Yours is a personal question with you. This is both true and important.

New Clubbing Proposition. WE have arranged to offer in connection with this paper, the new monthly farm magazine just started at Lincoln, Neb., by Prof. H. W. Campbell and devoted to the subject of how to farm in the dry country and how to get best results from soil tillage under normal conditions. This paper is "Campbell's Scientific Farmer" and we offer it clubbed with the Examiner both for $2.50 per year cash. Prof. Campbell's new paper is a monthly, chock full of good things, the only paper of its kind in the world, and it embodies the results of the editor's many years of painstaking investigation of the soil tillage proposition.
