A Passing Investment

Mr. John White, of 38 Highland Ave., Houlton, Maine, says: "I have been troubled with a cough every winter and spring. Last winter I tried many advertised remedies, but the cough continued until I bought a 50c bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery; before that was half gone, the cough was all gone. This winter the same happy result has followed; a few doses once more banished the annual cough. I am now convinced that Dr. King's New Discovery is the best of all cough and lung remedies. Sold under guarantee at A. L. Thornton's Drug store, 50c, and $1. Trial bottle free.

The Last Straws.

By Carl Williams.
Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Though the windows were opened to the fullest, no breath of air seemed to enter. The awning ropes hung limp and lifeless. The scallops that were bound in gay braid did not stir.
From the hall came the clatter of the cleaners as they worked in other offices already emptied of workers, and once or twice one of the women peered her head through the open door to see how soon she could get in to clean room No. 802.
Stella bent worriedly over the typewriter, her flying fingers writing in the address from a huge list on the desk beside her, while at a nearby table the office boy slipped in the circulars which the envelopes were intended to carry.
To Stella it had seemed the last straw when just before closing time the office manager had brought her the voluminous list and had ordered her to see that the circulars were sent out that evening. He was going out of town and had left early.
The other clerks had slipped out as soon as he had disappeared, and with only the assistance of the boy she had to send out 500 circulars. In his hurry to get away the manager had not even left the usual "supper money," so she would get nothing to eat until she reached her boarding house. It would be long after the regular dinner hour, and she would be lucky to get anything at all.
It was nearly 8 when the last envelope swallowed up the last circular and she was free to go. The elevator had stopped running, so she and her neighbor faced a walk down eight flights of stairs. For the third time in as many hours Stella fold herself that she was the last straw.

She was not used to the grinding roll of the city, and even the regular work was hard. When her father had died she had followed him to the grave within a few months all of the little savings had gone to the physician and the undertaker.
Stella faced the task of self support largely enough, but there were times when her overtaxed nerves were rubbed to rawness and even the little things of life bore heavily upon her.
The extra work coming at the close of a particularly trying day had exhausted her vitality. Listlessly she climbed aboard an uptown car and sank into a seat, glad that the home going rush was over and that she did not have to stand up all the way.
The approach of the conductor roused her from her absorption, and she opened her purse. As she glanced into the change compartment she gave a cry of dismay. The pocketbook, never well filled, even on pay days, was bare of coin.
Feverishly she tumbled its contents into her lap, replacing the articles after shaking them out one by one, but the 35 cents which had been there when she returned from lunch had disappeared.
"That bluff don't go!" The conductor's voice was hard and unfriendly. He had had a row with the inspector on the last trip, and his ill humor had not yet subsided.
"You'll have to pay or get off," he added as Stella looked up with the tears trembling on the heavy fringe of lashes. "We don't have to take tears for tickets. Got the coin?"
Not daring to trust her voice, Stella shook her head and thought of the three little walk ahead of her. The other last straws became insignificant in the face of the new trouble.
The conductor reached up to pull the rope, but across the aisle a man rose and checked him.
"Don't get off, miss."
Stella looked up into the friendly face and smiled her thanks through her tears.
"I've got the change handy."
"You must let me send you the money," she said. "I am very greatly obliged to you."
"I forget where I live," was the unblushing statement. "Just you forget it, too, until you see some one that

Among the deacons of a Presbyterian church in an Ohio town was a good old gentleman familiarly known as "Uncle Thomas." Although too deaf to hear, he was always in his accustomed seat at church, and his zeal in religious work was untiring. Owing to a shortage of song books in the Sabbath school some additional ones were ordered by "Uncle Thomas," who apprised the pastor of their arrival, and the latter agreed to announce the fact from the pulpit on Sunday morning.
The pastor made the promised announcement, among others, concluding with this one:
"Parents wishing their children baptized will please present them at the close of the service."
The good deacon jumped to his feet and in the loud voice peculiar to the deaf bawled out: "Those who haven't any can get them at my house for 50 cents apiece!"
As "Uncle Thomas" and his wife had always been childless this startling information almost broke up the meeting.—Success Magazine.

The Dog.

The dog is man's most faithful friend. A man may lie, but a dog won't; a man may get drunk, a man may slander his neighbor, a man may embezzle and defraud, a man may borrow money, a man may steal money, a man may go into politics, a man may knife his best friend, a man may run people down with an automobile, a man may gamble himself to ruin, a man may waste his substance in riotous living, a man may go to heaven, but a dog won't. Can these things be truthfully spoken of the other friends man has about him? There is a strong affinity between man and the dog. It must be the affinity of contrast. Yet any man will resent being called a dog. Possibly the dog would resent being called a man if he understood I do not know. I only know that the maxim works but one way, and if we should say, "Man is the dog's most faithful friend," there would be many to cavil, saying that it was mighty rough on the dog.—Success Magazine.

LAKE COUNTY ABSTRACT CO.

INCORPORATED

A COMPLETE RECORD

We have made an entire transcript of all Records in Lake County, which, in any way, affect Real Property in the county.
We have a complete Record of every Mortgage and transaction ever made in Lake County, and every Deed given.
ERRORS FOUND.
In transcribing the records we have found numerous mortgages recorded in the Deed record and not indexed; and many deeds are recorded in the Mortgage record and other books. Hundreds of mortgages and deeds are not indexed at all, and are most difficult to trace up from the records.
We have notations of all these Errors;
Others cannot find them. We have spent hundreds of dollars hunting up these errors, and we can guarantee our work.
