

Longest Will on Record.
What is called the longest will on record is that of Captain Robert Kearney, founder of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston.

It contains about 50,000 words. Printed and bound, it would make a good sized volume, comparing favorably in length with many a novel of the present day.

In its voluminous proportions this will is in striking contrast to one probated in New Orleans a number of years ago, in which the testator disposed of his earthly possessions in five words—namely, "Misses Rogers is my bequest."

The original of Captain Kearney's will is carefully preserved in the vaults of the register of probate of Suffolk county. In volume 1 of the record of wills probated it covers 110 pages, and it is recited in the will that the document was drawn up by the handwriting of the testator.

While Captain Kearney, who was originally a merchant taffer in London, left a fortune of fair proportions for his day, it is of interest to note that at the present day fortunes of millions of dollars are frequently disposed of in complicated trusts by only a few hundred words.—Boston Post.

Chivalry and Fatness.

Have you never noticed that great personal bulk and chivalry go almost always together? Well, they do, and I am reminded of a circumstance that happened long years ago. There was in congress from the state of Alabama a gentleman named Dixon Lewis. He was notorious for his stoutness as well as for his courtness and abilities. This gentleman was a Virginian by birth, but removed early to Alabama, which state he represented during several terms of congress and was in the senate at the time of his death in 1848. Biographers relate of him that one time after the adjournment of congress he was on his way home in a steamer that was wrecked and while he had an opportunity to do so refused to take a seat in a small boat because his great weight would jeopardize the lives of others in the boat, and, although for a time he was in great danger, he was at last rescued. There was a noticeable combination of chivalry and fatness.—Washington Post.

Famous Epicures.

In the ceiling of the dining room in Nero's "golden house," on the Palatine hill, were compartments inlaid with ivory which revolved, showing perfumes and flowers on the guests. Flowers were presented to the guests by slaves. They were crowned with wreaths. Usually after one course the tables were removed and others placed before the guests. Throughout the meal drinking continued until the banqueters fell under the table stupefied. In those days men lived to eat. Great generals spent fortunes as amateurs in years of warfare in gratifying their appetites. Lucullus on one dinner with Cicero and Pompey spent 50,000 drachmas, or $7,000. Phylax, who was famed for the delicacy and originality of his dinners, wrapped his tongue in linen when not using it. That he might better appreciate flavors of the viands he had it cleaned with fish skin before dining.

Earthquakes as Warnings.

The belief that earthquakes are signs or warnings owes its origin in part to prophecies in the Bible, where, for example, we read that "there shall be famines and pestilences and earthquakes" as portending future calamities. Earthquakes have led to the abolition of oppressive taxation, the abolition of mesqueras, the closing of theaters and even to the alteration of fashion. A New England paper of 1727 tells us that "a considerable town in this province has been so far awakened by the awful providence in the earthquake that the women have generally laid aside their hooped petticoats."—Nature.

Rule of Three.

"What a persevering governess," I will put it in another form. If it takes one servant nine hours to do the entire housework of a family how long will it take three servants to do it?"

Tommy—Oh, I know, teacher, I heard mamma speak of it only this morning.

Governess—Well, how long will it take them?

Tommy—Three times as long.—London Tatler.

Treason and Reason.

Archbishop Ryan once concluded a "blatant defense of the Irish cause" when he shouted: "But the Irish are guilty of treason." "Perhaps," replied the archbishop, "but please remember that what is treason elsewhere becomes reason in Ireland because of the absence."—Cleveland Leader.

Getting Along.

Miss Goodley—Miss Huddle goes in for everything. She's constantly doing something. Miss Knox—Yes, but the one thing she is doing most steadily she won't admit. Miss Goodley—What is that? Miss Knox—Growing older.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Too Much of It.

Greene—How does it happen that you don't trade at Cleaver's any more? You used to brag about the nice cuts of meat he always sent you. Is it because he wouldn't give you credit? Gray—On the contrary, it is because he did.—Boston Transcript.

Tommy's Lesson.

Tommy—Mamma, mamma, fingers were made before forks. Mamma—Yes, my boy, and that was made before pie. But you prefer pie, don't you, Tommy?—Yonkers Statesman.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Treating Overheated Horses.

As soon as a horse gives evidence of suffering from heat exhaustion, unitch him and remove the harness. Spray him along the back with ice cold water and apply it freely to the poll with a hose or a sponge. Let him stand out of doors in a shady place and with such treatment a recovery will usually come quickly.

If the exhaustion has become more pronounced and the horse's eyes are bloodshot, his nostrils fiery red and his pulse is bounding strong and fast, give him, in addition to the treatment mentioned, four ounces of good whisky in a pint of water or one ounce of aromatic spirits of ammonia and two ounces of spirits of nitrous ether in one quart of water, repeating the dose hourly until the pulse becomes normal. The horse holds his head up and stops panting.—Farm Progress.

Cure For Curl Leaf of Peach.

Professor Taft of the Michigan Agricultural college has announced an important discovery in that curl leaf which has been so destructive among peaches for several years, can be successfully treated by spraying. He estimates that fully nine-tenths of the crop of Libertia peaches are annually destroyed by curl leaf and might have been saved by spraying.

The solution used is one pound of copper sulphate dissolved in twenty-five gallons of water. The tree should be covered with the spray, as a single bud escaping treatment might spread the disease. It has been found that spraying with the solution in the fall is as effective as when it is used later. It may be used at any time after the leaves fall till just before the bud begins to swell in the spring.

Pink Eye in Horses.

Dr. Smedley, the well known writer on veterinary topics, describes pink eye in horses as follows: "Pink eye in horses is an influenza accompanied with a fever, more or less inflammation of the membranes of the eye, and eyelids which causes them to fall on a red or pink color; hence the name pink eye is given the disease. The remedy is good care, keeping the animal in a semi-darkened, pure aired stable, feeding on bran mash and boiled oats, with plenty of pure water to drink. Bathe the eyes with warm water in the black-fish with salt, and to every pint of the water add two ounces of extract of witch hazel. Horses thus treated usually recover in about nine days to two weeks. There is no preventive. It is the result of atmospheric conditions."—Farmers Advocate.

Improving Dairy Herds.

Many farmers will keep a cow a whole year to raise a twenty dollar calf, but the dairyman should not be satisfied with such a small profit. To improve a dairy herd it is essential to select cows from them with care and judgment. Then test the offspring to see if the good qualities of the parent have been transmitted or if any improvement has been made. After careful selection good feeding and care are of the highest importance if we expect to retain and improve the good qualities.

Remedy For Worms in Horses.

Mix together one pound each of sugar and salt; in this mix one-half pound of fine smoking tobacco, six ounces of powdered wormseed and four ounces of powdered sulphate of iron. As a dose for a mature horse give a heaping tablespoonful in a wheat bran mash every morning for two weeks; give smaller doses in proportion to the animal's age.—Farmers Advocate.
