CAREFUL FRUIT GROWING.

The French Obtain Better Results
Than the Americans.
In this country, says a French visitor, you just put things in the ground and let them grow more or less happily, as far as I can see. You leave soil so fertile that I suppose you can disperse with much that is necessary in our old country. But, all the same, I think the fruit might be benefited if you did some of the things that every French grower does. France is the country of detail, you know, and we think it pays in fruit growing just as it does in cooking.

The fruits we pet and pauper most are the peach and the grape. The majority of peaches grown in this country would seem to a Frenchman to be distinctly of the second order—that is, in the language of his fruit culture, a peach 'de plain vent,' or one grown on trees in an orchard. Between peaches grown thus, 'open to the wind,' and those trained on trellises against walls the French make a sharp distinction.

dark room. If the producer is growing for the market the bunches are looked at every day, for the slightest speck of imperfection will keep him from disposing of his stock to the best houses.
The same care in lesser degree runs through all the French grower does.
In certain places, but only in a few, the apricot is treated with all the care shown to the peach. It is less profitable to grow, for it does not keep well except by an expensive process of coating it with wax. The trees, however, are kept very carefully pruned, and the production of each is limited.

SHE WAS ENGAGED.

The Tale of a Business Man Who Met
His Match.

He was engaging a new stenographer, and he lit of his words and buried them at her in a way to frighten any ordinary girl out of her wits.
"Chew gum?" he asked.
"No, sir."
"Talk slang?"
"No, sir."
"Make googoo eyes at the fellows when you're not busy?"
"No, sir."
"Know how to spell 'cat' and 'dog' correctly?"
"Yes, sir."
"Chin through the telephone half a dozen times a day?"
"No, sir."
"Usually put the office force how much the firm owes and all the rest of its private business you learn?"
"No, sir."
He was thinking of something else to ask her when she took a hand in the matter and put a few queries.
"Smoke cheap cigars when you're dictating?" she asked.
"Why or no," he gasped in astonishment.
"Take it out of the stenographer's hide when you've had a scrap at home and got the worst of it?"
"Of course not!"
"Slam things around and swear when business is bad?"
"Never."
"Lay for your employees with a club when they get caught in a block some morning?"
"No, indeed."
"Think you know enough about grammar and punctuation to appreciate a good stenographer when you get one?"
"I—I think so."
"Want me to go to work, or is your time worth so little that—"

The Cautious Reporter.
"Young man," said the editor to the new reporter, "you lack caution. You naïveté learn never to state a thing as a fact until it has been proved a fact.
You are apt to get us into libel suits.
Do not say, 'The cashier stole the funds.' Say, 'The cashier who is alleged to have stolen the funds.' That's all. Oh, get something about that First ward social tonight."
The next day halfway down the social column the editor saw the following cautious paragraph:
"It is rumored that a card party was given last evening to a number of reputed ladies of the First ward. Mrs.
Smith, gossip says, was the hostess, and the festivities are reported to have continued until 11:20 in the evening.
The alleged hostess is believed to be the wife of John Smith, the so called 'high priced grocer.'"—Success Magazine.

Were All Out.

An acquaintance called on some ladies in an Alabama town who had at the time been much wearied by an apparently endless succession of callers.
The door was opened by Augustus Butts, the faithful old butler. "Are the ladies in?" asked the caller. "No, ma'am, they're all out." "I am so sorry that I missed them," continued the visitor, handing him her cards. "I particularly wished to see Mrs. Jones."
"Yes, ma'am, thank you, ma'am," responded Augustus. "They're all out, ma'am, and Mrs. Jones is particularly out, ma'am."

Genial.
"Biggins has a patient and cheerful disposition."
"Yes," answered Mr. Sirius Barker.
"If Biggins owes you money, he doesn't get angry, no matter how often you ask him for it."—Washington Star

Should Have Waited.
"Bliger eloped with his cook, the unfeeling wretch?"
"Well, I don't know. Why shouldn't he if he wanted to?"
"But his wife was just going to give a dinner party."—New York Life.

'Twas Ever Thus.
When I was a lad
A digestion I had
That surely was a jim dandy.
And it seemed to me tough
I could never get enough Of such stuff as cheese, mince pie and candy.
Things have changed, I must own,
Since to manhood I've grown.
Now cheese I can get by the hummock, Piles of candy foot high
And just jashin's of pie;
But, oh, where is that juvenis stomach!

Help! Help! I'm Falling

Thus cried the hair. And a kind neighbor came to the rescue with a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor. The hair was saved! This was because Ayer's Hair Vigor is a regular hair medicine. Falling hair is caused by a germ, and this medicine completely destroys these germs. Then the healthy scalp gives rich, healthy hair.

DIARRHOEA

There is no need of anyone suffering long with this disease, for to effect a quick cure it is only necessary to take a few doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy

In fact, in most cases one dose is sufficient. It never fails and can be relied upon in the most severe and dangerous cases. It is equally valuable for children and is the means of saving the lives of many children each year.
