LAKE COUNTY ABSTRACT CO. INCORPORATED

A Complete Record

We have made an entire transcript of all Records in Lake County, which, in any way, affect Real Property in the county.

We have a complete Record of every Mortgage and transfer ever made in Lake County, and every Deed given.

ERRORS FOUND.

In transcribing the records we have found numerous mortgages recorded in the Deed record and not indexed; and many deeds are recorded in the Mortgage record and other books. Hundreds of mortgages and deeds are not indexed at all, and are most difficult to trace up from the records.

We have notations of all these Errors:

Others cannot find them. We have spent hundreds of dollars hunting for these errors, and we can guarantee our work.

J. D. VENATOR, Manager.

peared on a tray. I was sure that mother would not approve of cocktail for me, as it sounds so fast for a young girl who isn't yet out. When I excused myself Mrs. Ess Kay laughed and said, "Then what about that sherry cocktail?"

While I was trying to think what she meant Sally came into the hall, and immediately after I was surprised by a kind of musical moaning which began suddenly and kept on for a long time.

"That's the Japanese gong," said Mrs. Ess Kay when I looked round to see where the sound came from. "It's for dinner. Potter, give Betty your arm."

I was glad she didn't use that nickname I'd been thinking of, for if she had I should certainly have laughed.

We began dinner by eating pinky-yellow melons cut in half and filled with chopped ice. I thought at first that it must be a mistake and they ought to have come in at dessert, but everybody else ate theirs without appearing disconcerted, so I did mine, and it was good. So were all the other things that followed in a long procession, though they were very strange, and some of them I shouldn't have known how to eat. If Mr. Parker, whose place was next to mine, hadn't told me

We had bouillon partly frozen instead of soup, and then came the most extraordinary little fried animals which quite startled me, they were so like exaggerated brown spiders, done in egg and breadcrumbs. "Soft shell crabs, dear child," said Mrs. Ess Kay, "and you eat every bit, down to the tippest end of his claw."

I should never have managed the green corn, which grows like lots of pearls set close together in rows on a fat stick, if Mr. Parker hadn't scraped all the pearls off for me with a fork and put butter and salt on them. I liked him a little better after that, for he did the thing with great skill. When I had got so far nothing could surprise me, and I didn't turn a hair when I found that I was expected to eat pears cut up with salad oil. But they were alligator pears, and when you tasted them it appeared that they had nothing whatever to do with the fruit kingdom. Best of all I liked the watermelon which came at the end, cut in little balls, looking like strawberry water ice and soaked in champagne. I hope that all the things to eat in America won't be so nice or I may grow stout before I go back, and Vic says it is better for a girl to hang herself.

It was very trying, too, to find that I was keeping every course waiting. I've never been accused of greenness at home, though I've often been made to feel guilty of most other sins in the calendar, but I did feel queer when I began to realize that everybody else had finished what was on their plates, when I'd just about discovered what the thing was. It made me so uncomfortable to see them all leaning back waiting for me, after their plates had been whisked away, that I took to bolting the rest of my food, and by the time we'd got rid of nine courses in about half an hour I felt qualified to write the autobiography of an anacard.

As for the lead water, I had intended to refuse it at any cost, because Vic and mother both solemnly warned me that it made all the difference between a complexion and mere skin. But the minute I landed I began thinking hard about lead water, and I soon discovered that when you are in America a comparatively small consideration like a complexion would never keep you from drinking it. In fact, nothing would. You feel as if you must drink lead water, pints of lead water, in rapid succession, if not only your complexion, but your whole face were to be swept away in the deluge. Once you have got the taste nothing can quench it but lead water, more lead water and still more lead water.

After dinner, while we were having heavenly Turkish coffee in the fountain court, who should come but Mr. Doremus. It seemed to me a funny time to call, but apparently the others didn't think it out of the way. He wanted us to go to some theater on a roof, and I should have loved it, especially when Mrs. Ess Kay said you didn't get smudges on your nose as you would if you sat on a roof in London, a thing which I never heard of anybody except cats doing. But she was tired, and I suppose it would have been ladylike for me to be, only I was much too excited. So Mr. Doremus stayed, and he and Mr. Parker talked more slang in an hour than I think I ever heard in my whole life, though I have always considered Stan talented in that way.

But Stan's slang and Vic's are quite different from American slang. In America you build up your whole conversation out of it, and it's wonderful. I longed for a notebook while those two men were talking to put everything down, and I felt if people were often going to be as funny as that I should need to go home soon to rest my features.

When I go home I shall probably have collected so much slang in my pores that I shall talk about putting on my "glad rags" when I'm going to dress for dinner; my life will be my "natural"; I shall call Stan's motor car the blue assassin or the homicide wagon; I shall say my best frocks are "mighty conducive"; I shall get bored by poor Mr. Duckworth, our newest curate, and tell him he's "the limit"; I may even take to abbreviating my affirmatives and negatives by saying "yep" and "nope" when I'm in a hurry, but if I do fall into these ways, I tremble to think what may be the effect on mother.

younger, with her square chin and bold blue eyes as pale as hers. The likeness is all the stronger because Mr. Parker wears no mustache or beard, and his dark hair, which falls in two straight, thick blocks over his forehead, is parted in the middle. You would know if you saw him riding a white bear at the north pole that he was an American young man. Why or how, I'm not experienced enough in Americans to tell, but I'm beginning to think that all American men and all American women have a dim sort of family likeness to each other. With the girls, it's their chins and the way they do their hair. But with the men it's more mysterious. They look less lazy and more feverish than our men, yet at the same time more humorous, and their clothes seem always to be new.

Mrs. Ess Kay's nose turns down, and her brother's turns up, which is the principal difference in their features, and his makes him look very impudent, though rather clever and amusing.

"My sister wrote me about your dimples, Lady Betty," said he when I my dimples or other features. "Don't be mad with me," he went on, "or I shall think I've estimated them too low. On mature consideration, as we soldier chaps say at a court martial, I should be inclined to set them higher. If you'll just show them again!"

"I think, if you don't mind," said I, "that I'd rather speak of the weather."

"I'm afraid you're not used to Americans," said he.

"I've met several, crossing, but none of them talked to me about such things," I replied rather primly.

"If they had I should have challenged them," he retorted. "While you're staying with my sister I consider myself a sort of guardian of your ears, and part of my duty will be to keep off men—other men—with a stick, you see."

"No, I don't see," said I. "Not that there will be the least necessity for you to do anything of the sort."

"Oh, won't you? Well, you just wait till you get to Newport, and you'll find out differently. I've applied for leave on purpose to help Kath protect you, and I expect to put on a suit of chain armor under my clothes. But first you're coming to visit me at West Point."

"I don't think I am," I said. "Oh, but you are. It's a promise of Kath's. And shan't I be proud to show you around? You shall see Filtration Walk the first thing. It's what the ladies admire the most at the Point. Perhaps you've heard of it?"

"No," said I. "And I never heard of West Point. Is it a suburb of New York?"

"Not much. It's our American Sandhurst. But you English people don't know anything about this side. I guess, now, you think that Florida is in South America?"

"I haven't thought about it yet," I replied.

"That's right. I don't ask anything better than to teach you the geography of the United States. We'll begin with Filtration Walk. But see here, Lady Betty, that rose you've got on isn't a good sample of what we can grow over here. Didn't that maid of my sister's take you something a little better from me?"

"Something much bigger and grander," I said, feeling loyal to my pale white bud. "I was meaning to thank you."

Nobody was there except a young man in evening dress.

smiled, and I screwed my mouth into prunes and prisms as quickly as I could.

"I should have thought such things were hardly worth writing about," said I.

"My impression is that they're worth about a million dollars an eighth of an inch," he replied, "and I bet they'd fetch that in a bear market."

I began to wish that Mrs. Ess Kay or Sally would come, for I'm not used to having persons who have just introduced themselves make remarks on
