

"What fun!" I exclaimed. "I've never slept in a train even on the coast."

"If you had it would be different from this one," said he. "Can you be ready in twenty-five minutes? The train which we call the Twentieth Century starts at 2:45."

"I'm ready now," said I. "The sooner we're on the way the better. But about Yvonne! Will they allow him to sleep and eat too?"

"I expect I can arrange that," Mr. Brett answered in such a confident way that I felt sure he could do it or anything else he set out to do. It really was lucky for me that he happened to be traveling west that same day, and such an extraordinary coincidence.

"Are you going on journalistic business?" I asked.

"No; it's business I'm undertaking for a friend," he explained. "But I hope to get something good for myself out of it in the end."

"Oh, I do hope you will," I replied. "I'm sure you deserve to."

"I'm sure I don't," said he, laughing, but I shall try hard for it all the same. You know you told me to be ambitious."

"I know I did," I answered.

A moment later he said that he must hurry off and attend to the tickets, and had only time to glance through some papers the waiter brought me, with columns full of Mohunslah's marriage, when he was back again with a jab.

While I read an account of the wedding and gushing paragraphs about me I wondered if there mightn't be things so flattering in the same papers tomorrow.

"If it got out that I had run away, would there be a scandal?" I asked Mr. Brett in the cab. But he said that I needn't be afraid. Mrs. Stuyvesant Knox was too clever a woman to let anything she wouldn't like get into the papers. She would send a paragraph to the effect that Lady Betty Bulkeley had been suddenly called home or had gone to visit other friends or something of that sort. "But she will almost certainly cable to your people," he went on.

"Yes, but she won't know where I've gone till afterward, and anyhow they can't object to my being with Miss Woodburn," I answered him.

"You don't think they'll send for you to come home at once?"

I shook my head. "They won't do that. They don't want—that is, they think it wiser for me to stop on this side longer, now I'm here."

"I'm very glad of that," said Mr. Brett and he looked at me as if he really were glad in spite of all the trouble I'd made him.

Chapter 14

THE train for Chicago is perfectly wonderful, not like an ordinary, human kind of train at all. I'm in it now, and have been writing everything about the wedding and what happened afterward because I have a whole room of my own and I'm much too excited to sleep.

There's a bed in the room—not a hard shelf, but quite a wide, springy bed, with an electric light close by the pillow; there are walls made of mirrors; there's a sofa, a washstand and a palm leaf fan; there's a picture in the window so that you can have it open without getting black, and there would be plenty of places to put my things if I'd brought three times as many. But better than anything else, there's a soft, sweet, brown maid who goes with the room and isn't an extra. She's the same brown as the porters, only paler than most, and the train wasn't ten minutes outside New York when she appeared to ask what she could do for me. There was nothing at the time, but she didn't go away. She looked about for a minute, then pouncing on the palm leaf she began to fan me, slowly and gracefully, not holding on by anything, though the train was hurtling itself through the state of New York apparently with the speed in which light travels around the world. I never could remember how many times it can do the whole distance in a minute, but whatever it is, it has the air of being a tourist.

I thanked her a good deal and said I wouldn't trouble her any more, though it was very nice, and she kept straight on, like a mechanical dog, until I felt that in common decency she ought to fan her. If any one in England, especially any one in her position, only there aren't such positions, had asked half as many questions as she did people would be extremely surprised and offended, but I would defy even the crossiest person to be offended with this soft brown thing. It would have been too ungrateful not to answer her nicely when she was keeping my flies at bay with extreme inconsequence to herself, so I admitted that I was English, told what county I came from, how long I'd been in the States, where I'd been staying, how I liked America, where I was going now, and ended up by satisfying her as to my age and whether I had a mother. I also stated that I was neither married nor engaged. The dear creature rewarded me for all this by telling me a great deal about herself and her relatives, and a church picnic she attended last Sunday, where there were more young gentlemen than ladies—"which always makes parties so nice for us girls."

"I must say that's a mighty pretty hat you've got," said she at last. "It came from England. And ay, but that is a sweet waist! I'd give my life for that waist!"

If I had had a twin sister of the sweet waist with me I couldn't have resisted pressing it upon her, and I don't believe she would have refused.

As soon as Mr. Brett got me nicely settled in my room he said we wouldn't meet again during the journey. I was sorry and wanted to know why, so he explained that his ticket was different from mine. I hope that is the only reason, really, and that it isn't because he thinks he ought not to be traveling with me. I suppose he is going second class.

I did miss him at dinner, which I had in a grand restaurant on board half a mile away from me in the train. It was fun being there, seeing all the people and being served by fascinating black waiters, but it would have been more fun with him. I longed to explain to Mr. Brett about the glorious sunset which marched with us along the Hudson river for an enchanted hour, and I couldn't half enjoy it for wondering every minute as it changed from one beauty to another whether he were watching too.

We have tenderly radiant sunsets at home, which I love, but they're not startlingly magnificent as in America, where all things even cloud effects—are managed on such a sensational scale. I saw some skies to remember in Newport, though never one like this, but perhaps the magical charm of it was partly dependent on the gleaming river.

When the daylight blue had faded there was a kind of dusky lull; then, as if flames leaped up out of the clear water, river and mountains and sky ran gold, reddening slowly till the color burned deep and vivid at the heart of a rose. From crimson was born violet, soft blue violet that hung like a robe over the mountains, while the living name of the river was slashed with silver, and as one gazed and gazed, afraid to turn away, a sudden sudden flood of amethyst light out of the floating haze. It was dazzling for a moment, but before one realized the change the brilliance had been drunk up by purple shadows. The outline of trees and foothills melted into the pearly gloom, and, at last, with one spring quiver of light, all warmth of color was blotted out. Water and sky paled to a pensive gray-blue, and, as the French say, "it made night."

There was a tremendous menu for dinner, such as we used to have for breakfast on shipboard, and doves of things whose names I'd never heard before. Just for curiosity I ordered several of the strangest, and some of them were a great success. For instance, there was "succotash," which sounds as if it might be a guttural insult flung at the mouth of one red Indian brave by another, but when it was (figuratively speaking) flung at mine by a black waiter it turned out to be something more in the nature of a compliment. It looked like beryls mixed with pearls, though it was really only green beans stirred up with American corn, and the two got on so well together you felt they had been born for each other.

It's now about 2 o'clock in the morning, and it seems as if we must have raced across half America, but we have a long, long way to go still, so says the soft brown thing, who looked in on me about an hour ago to ask in a casual way whether, if she should go to Europe to live, she might not be taken for an Italian?

When I was a little girl and my nurse used to make up tales to put me to sleep at night, I would sometimes get impatient and tell her to "go down into the story and find out what happened next." Just now I feel as if that is what I should like to do in my future.

Facts From France.

Two hundred and forty thousand paving blocks a day are turned out by a new machine owned by the municipality of Paris.

The corps of life saving dogs organized in Paris in 1900 achieved but one rescue from the Seine in eight years. Of the fourteen dogs one only now remains.

Mme. Bolette, a widow, of Paris put a latch to the papers in the grate, forgetting that it was there she had concealed 500 francs, which was all she possessed. When she realized what she had done she lost her reason.

A Parisian named Leichenmann has committed suicide in a novel manner. He bored a hole in a trunk, passed an India rubber gas tube through it and turned on the gas. He then got into the trunk, shut the lid and was speedily asphyxiated.

New Way to Make Hair Curl

Quince seed tea is one of the newest recipes for making the hair curl. It is made by putting a tablespoonful of quince seed into a pint of water and boiling it. The clear tea then is drained off. Use this to moisten the hair before putting it into curlers.

Men's Equal Suffrage League.

A men's league for woman's suffrage has been formed in Holland, and the Lutheran church in that country has given women a vote in all church affairs.

Prof. H. A. Howell, of the University of Havana, Cuba, writes from School, Havana, Cuba. "On the night of February 3rd our baby was taken sick with a very severe cold. The next day was worse and the following night his condition was desperate. He could not lie down and it was necessary to have him in the arms every moment. Even then his breathing was difficult. I did not think he would live until morning. At last I thought of my mother's remedy, Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which we gave, and it afforded prompt relief, and now three days later, he has fully recovered. Under the circumstances I would not hesitate a moment in saying that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and that only, saved the life of our dear little boy." For sale by Daly and Hall.

Hordes of unemployed men from the larger cities of the country flocked to the big harvest fields west of the Mississippi river the past summer in the hope of reaping the high wages which they had been able to command in previous seasons. Instead of getting $4 a day, as they had hoped, they had to be content in most cases with $2, as there were harvest hands and to spare, the situation proving to be one in which helpers were competing for a chance to work rather than employers striving to get help at any price. Many who went west to get work were unable to secure it at all, with the result that the close of the harvest season in September found them far from home, with nothing to pay their way back.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

A holding off of a killing frost has enabled many farmers in the northern portion of the corn belt to cut their corn with a harvester and thus save the large amount of valuable roughage that is for the most part wasted if the corn is husked in the field and the stalks allowed to stand. Well cured corn fodder is just as nutritious and valuable as timothy, and it is merely a matter of good management to save as much of it as one can use or sell.

Good Liment.

You will find a good while before you find a preparation that is equal to Chamberlain's Liment a sure for muscular and rheumatic pains, for the cure of sprains and soreness of the muscles. It is equally valuable for lame back and all deep seated muscular pains. 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by Daly and Hall.

An extensive cattle feeder of the writer's acquaintance has for a number of years fed turnips to the steers in his feed lots, it being his view that, while the food elements which the turnips contained were of little actual value, they served to keep the animals in good condition and to increase their appetite for the regular grain ration.

The Lurid Glow of Doom

was seen in the red face, hands and body of the little son of H. M. Adams, of Henrietta, Pa. His awful plight from eczema, had, for five years, defied all remedies and baffled the best doctors, who said the poisoned blood had affected his lungs and nothing could save him. "But," writes his mother, "seven bottles of Electric Bitters completely cured him." Sores and all Blood Disorders and Rheumatism Electric Bitters is supreme. Only 50c. Guaranteed by A. L. Thornton.

The way a lad does his work at fifteen is a pretty accurate criterion of the way he will do it at forty-five. Both boy and parent should on this account see to it that in the formative years he learns to do his work with thoroughness and spirit.

This is the most dangerous time of the year to catch cold, and it is the hardest time to cure it. If you should take a few doses of Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup will act very promptly. Its laxative principle cures the cold by driving it from the system by a gentle but natural action of the bowels. Children especially like Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup as it tastes good, nearly like maple sugar. It is sold by Daly and Hall.

Nature seems to abhor a vacuum, which accounts for the fact that land which possesses any fertility at all will produce a crop of weeds in lieu of something more useful and why a lazy boy or girl is prone to get into mischief and bad habits.

Unequaled as a Cure for Croup

"Besides being an excellent remedy for colds and throat troubles Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is unequalled as a cure for croup," says Harry Wilson, of Wayne town, Ind. When given as soon as the croupy cough appears, this remedy will prevent the attack. It is used successfully in many thousands of homes. For sale by Daly and Hall.

As a determining factor in a person's success in life the importance of good health and a robust constitution can hardly be overestimated. It follows from this that any form of disipation or excess which tends to undermine one's health or to render him less vigorous or energetic is a bar to the highest measure of success of which he would otherwise be capable. In all too many cases there does not come a realization of the force of this truth until it is too late to repair the damage which may have been effected through ignoring it. Many a young fellow who has no money at the start is nevertheless endowed with a fine physique, which as his chief and exclusive capital stock he should husband with the utmost care by clean and temperate living.

Kills Would-be Slayer

A merciless murderer is Appendicitis with many victims. But Dr. King's New Life Pills kill it by prevention. They gently stimulate stomach, liver and bowels, preventing that clogging that invites Appendicitis, curing constipation, Biliousness, Chills, Malaria, Headache and Indigestion. 25 cc at A. L. Thornton's.

An inspection of different sections of the writer's orchard at picking time this fall shows that those portions of the orchard which had been given a vigorous pruning bore fruit of a much better size and quality. It was also noticeable that the results of the spraying treatments were more pronounced, this evidently being due to the fact that the spray was more evenly distributed among the less dense tops.

For Diseases of the Skin

Nearly all diseases of the skin such as eczema, tetter, salt rheum and barber's itch, are characterized by an intense itching and smarting, which often makes life a burden and disturbs sleep and rest. Quick relief may be had by applying Chamberlain's Salve. It allays the itching and smarting almost instantly. Many cases have been cured by its use. For sale by Daly and Hall.

The dry weather which has prevailed generally over the country the past five weeks has resulted in cutting down materially the potato yield. This means that there will likely be good prices for all marketable stock. The grower who has raised a large crop should post himself thoroughly on the general market situation before contracting his potatoes.

A Pleasant Physic

When you want a pleasant physic give Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets a trial. They are mild and gentle in their action and always produce a pleasant cathartic effect. Call at Daly and Hall's drug store for sample.

It is said that a cupful of boiling hot water poured on the growing cabbage just as it is beginning to head will kill any worms that may be on the plant, yet will not do it any serious injury. One who has tried this plan says that fine heads were secured from plants treated in this fashion.

The best known pills and the best pills made are De Witt's Little Early Risers. They are small, easy to take, gentle and certain, and are sold by Daly and Hall.

A number of town boys we know have this year spent the major part of their summer vacation working on nearby farms and have as a result of their industry earned from $40 to $70 apiece. In addition to this financial gain they have acquired a knowledge of different kinds of farm work which is both practical and useful and will come in handy at some future time. When these same boys attended the county or state fair they had the satisfaction of knowing that they had earned a vacation as well as that the money they spent was their own. Having spent the summer thus, these boys are in a mood to take up their school work with interest and zest and will get much more good out of it.

We say without hesitation that De Witt's Kidney and Bladder Pills are unequalled for weak kidneys, backache, inflammation of the bladder and all urinary disorder. They are anti-septic and act promptly in all cases of weak back, backache, neuralgia and rheumatic pain. Avoid no substitute. We sell and recommend them. Daly and Hall.

COUNTY ORCHARDS MUST BE SPRAYED

All farmers or fruit growers in Lake county are hereby notified that under the state law it is imperative that all fruit trees should be sprayed.

For that reason fruit growers must obtain proper appliances in order that such work can be done during the period previous to budding in the spring. It is known that two dangerous fungus growths already have found lodgement in the county. Spraying will destroy all insects and fungus growth. All fruit growers will observe this official notice, and comply with the requirements of the law. Dated, New Pine Creek, Ore., Dec. 19, 1908.
