ERRORS FOUND

In transcribing the records we have found numerous mortgages recorded in the Deed record, and not indexed; and many deeds are recorded in the Mortgage record and other books. Hundreds of mortgages and deeds are not indexed at all, and are most difficult to trace up from the records.

We have notations of all these Errors:

Others cannot find them. We have spent hundreds of dollars hunting up these errors, and we can guarantee our work.

CARE OF THE FOAL

Wean Slowly, Feed Liberally and Handie the Animal Before Weaning.

The most suitable way to wenn a foal is to begin to keep him from his dam two or three hours dally, increasing the time till they are together from about 9 p m. to about 6 a. m., finally parting them some morning or some evening.

A daily feed of crushed oats mingled with a little chopped hay and bran given to the foal a week or two before weaning will soon teach him to be independent of the mother, but care must be taken not to allow the mare to have access to the manger while the foal is eating. She would probably eat it her-

Before the foal is weaned it is important that it should have been handled. To get a foal haltered, taught to be led about and to be able to handle it, lift its feet up, etc., without its offering any resistance is a work that involves a certain amount of time, but the time spent now is time saved when the foal is old enough to be broken in.

If the foal meets with an accident or falls a victim to some of the numerous allments to which horsefiesh is liable, a foal which has been handled is far easier to doctor than one which has never been touched.

After mare and foal have been final ly separated the foal may be kept in a loose box, out of the hearing of other on how it is treated during the first winter of its existence; therefore to do full justice it is essential that it should be liberally but not lavishly fed from weaning time till the time arrives the following spring to turn away into some luxuriant pasture for the sum-

To keep a foal on short commons with the idea of reducing the cost of the keep is, according to the old saying, cent wise and dollar foolish.

Foals invariably do best when they junction with the main channel of have company, and if two or three stream. Also all dams or obstruct- foals can live together so much the betlons on said streams must be pro- ter. Before they are turned out in the morning they may have a feed of crushed oats, chopped hay and bran. The same ration may be given when they are brought in again at night, with the addition of an armful of whole hay. An occasional linseed mash may also be given, as it is beneficial in keeping the bowels open. Two or three pieces of rock sait in the manger for them to lick is also a good thing.

After the mare has left the foal steps must be taken to suppress the secretion of milk, and with that object in view dry food and plenty of exercise may be given.

A small quantity of milk may be drawn away daily, and rubbing the udder with molasses has also been found beneficial.

A dose of physic will also hasten the process, but it should be withheld if possible, especially if the mare is in foal.-W. R. Gilbert.

Stanchion For Ringing Hogs. There is a difference of opinion about the desirability of putting rings in hogs' noses. Those who favor the practice usually do the work by main strength and awkwardness. The illustration shows a stanchion that may be built into the fence in the corner of the pen or it may form one end of a large crate and be placed just outside of the pen so the hogs may be driven into it one at a time through a small gate or doorway. One man drives the hog in, while the other stands with his hand on the loose stanchion. When the hog undertakes to squeeze through the stanchion is shut just behind his ears and he is held firmly until the rings are adjusted. Two men in this way can ring a pen full of hogs in a very short time and with very little labor. As soon as the rings are adjusted the stanchlon is opened and the hog permitted to pass on through.

An Object Lesson.

One of the best examples of successful modern dalrying and one of the most instructive is the experience of Charles Foss of Illinois. He ingreased the income of his ninety acre A;rm from $1.000 to well over $2,000 and believes that he can double the income again along the same lines. The best of it is that his methods would seem to apply in almost any dairy section. Probably his own explanation of his success is the best.

He says, "This improvement has come about by weighing and testing the milk, by selling the low producers, buying and raising better cows, using the silo and feeding a more nearly balanced ration, and by studying and supplying the individual needs of the Value of Sheep.

Sheep improve the land where they feed. This is quickly summed up in the old saying. "The hoof of the sheep is golden." They live on weeds and other odd kinds of forage that other stock will leave. There I netually more feed for cows in a pasture where a few sheep run than there would be without the sheep because the sheep destroy bushes that crowd had shade the grass and because sheep eat what cows do not care for. A few sheep are profitable on any farm. A good many sheep are profitable on some farms. Much depends on the
