LIMELIGHT SEEKERS.

Astor Says They Destroy American Society's Good Name.

The ideas which have gone abroad about American society are largely formed by a few people who love the limelight and do not in any way represent the real tone of that society, according to the conclusion reached in the October number of the Delimitator by Mrs. Astor, whose advancing years have compelled her to abdicate the social throne which she had so long occupied.

"Their sole object," she declares, "is notoriety. They have given entertainments that belonged under a circus tent rather than in a gentleman's own home. When a distinguished man arrives from the other side he is seized upon relentlessly, although possibly a stranger to his hostess, and plunged into a mad whirl of extraordinary festivities. He enters upon them with much the same spirit that we would have as spectators of an Indian war dance, and thus he forms his opinion of us. I have never entertained a foreigner in my life unless he came to me with a letter of introduction."

Mrs. Astor does not agree with those who think that she could have done a great deal toward making American society democratic, as it is in London, and open to any one of intellectual attainments. In her opinion it is only those whose authority, like that of the English king or the great old families of England, is never questioned who can do these things.

As to the political salon, she considers that also impossible in America, since many of our political men "seem to base their title to public favor upon their unscrupulous manners and lack of refinement."

"If they were all like Mr. Roosevelt," she adds, "what a difference there would be!"

Of the young people of New York society Mrs. Astor speaks much more charitably than some other critics. They have the ideas of a new age, she says, but "they are not degenerate, and they are not vicious." She has heard that the young women "smoke and drink and do other terrible things," but she does not know one "who is a cigarette fiend or who drinks to excess."

Mrs. Astor is not vain enough to think New York will not be able to get along very well without her. Many women will rise to take her place. In closing she asserts her belief in a republic "where money has a great deal to say, as in ours."

WHAT A MAN LIKES.

A General Look of Fresh Air Which Gives the Lie to Laziness.

An attractive quality of the charming woman lies in absolute neatness. Men like to see well kept, neatly dressed hair, a skin that looks as though the morning bath were the rule and not the exception, well brushed white teeth, a well kept pair of hands and a general look of fresh air which gives the lie to laziness. The charming woman will have about her no bits of torn lace, buttons off, belt crooked and skirt of uneven length, revealing possibly untidy shoes. Ask a man which of three women he most admires and see if he does not unhesitatingly pick out the one who is well groomed. A charge often laid at man's door is that, after all, he chooses the silly, frivolous girl, passing by the good, common sense girl who would have made him such an excellent wife. Poor man! Is he so very much to blame? Common sense is a splendid quality, but by itself how terribly dull and uninteresting it is! This should teach a girl a most important lesson on the point too often overlooked—viz, that the charming woman always has a firm foundation of character and common sense, which she generally keeps well underneath, like the anchor that holds the ship. She may seem to sway with every wind of frivolity that blows. She is ready for all the fun that is going, even to the verge of being a madcap. Narrow minded people may want to say spiteful things of her, but they cannot truthfully do it, because the anchor of character and common sense says to her, "Thus far and no farther." She knows to a hair's breadth where right ends and wrong begins, and nothing wrong, mean, spiteful or unkind enters into her scheme of life. It is this combination of strong, sweet character with fun and frivolity that gives her that inexplicable, irresistible something which spells charm.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

A clear soup contains but a small amount of real food. Its value is in its power to stimulate the flow of gastric juice and to sharpen the appetite for the feast to come. A certain housewife sometimes serves frozen chocolate, which is merely the morning beverage frozen to a mush in the freezer. Serve in sherbet glasses, with a spoonful of whipped cream in each glass. Her rule for the beverage calls for two squares of chocolate, a cupful of sugar, a few grains of salt, a cupful of boiling water and three cupfuls of rich milk. A delicious way of using left over fish, such as weakfish, bluefish and others, is to fake the fish, removing all bones, then let it come to the boiling point in a nicely made cream sauce seasoned with cayenne and flavored with parsley and dried onion. Pour it after seasoning over several moist slices of toast and decorate with points of butter and sprigs of fresh parsley.

One hour Wasted? WITH a rifle that is right every stack of targets shows an improved score. Without it you will never really enjoy the pride and exhilaration of progress, and easy progress. Above all, the trigger pull must be right. The Savage trigger pull is adjustable. The loading mechanism must be handy. The Savage is simplicity itself. The micrometer must be refined. The Savage registers the 1000ths of an inch vertically or laterally. In fact, every feature of the Savage Target Rifle can be adjusted and suited to the exact needs of each target shooter. Can you expect to improve your golf with the wrong club? Can you write as well with a fine pen if you like a stub better? That is what we mean by the "exact needs" of each target shooter. The Savage Rifle satisfies. Its accuracy is partly due to its special rifling and its beautiful balance.

Its loading device is the simplest ever put on a target rifle. Every time you drop in a cartridge, the opening of the "arm" creates the old shilly-clanging "arm" noise the rifle. That's all there is to it. Chambered to shoot short, long, and long rifle cartridges. 22 inch heavy barrel. Smooth, not blued. The arm weighs 4 1/2 pounds has Swiss butt plates. Has no equal for target or off-hand shooting. Price, $6.50.

THE BEST BUY IN THE COUNTY

Located in the special end of the rich Chewaucan Valley, in an ideal, protected and picturesque location, with pure cold water at ten feet.

With the advent of the railroad will contro' the trade of the 75,000 acres of this rich valley, enormous bodies of timber to the west, the great winter range to the north and the promising gold run mines to the east.

This is the point on the railroad location where they have located the town for this valley and surrounding country, and on account of grades and curvature is the ONLY practical location.

John F. Stevens, Hill's chief engineer, lately said: "Central and Southern Oregon is an empire capable of sustaining a population the size of Portland."

Where will this population be? In a few natural locations. We have one. Chewaucan Valley, according to Government records, is two degrees warmer all year, has more rainfall, and is 500 feet lower than Goose Lake Valley.

This comparison is with one of the best valleys.

Invest a small amount now and secure big returns when the railroads and this population comes.

Our town is laid out in an attractive and up-to-date manner. Just a few of the very best lots now for sale at a low figure.
