XVI.—Farm Buildings
By C. V. GREGORY,
Agricultural Division, Iowa State College

The farm, their arrangement and location and the kind of material to make them of are problems that often perplex the farmer...

most important farm building is the barn. This is usually built as a shelter for the cows, horses and young calves...

FIG. XXXI—ONE OF THE BEST TYPES OF FARM BARN.

distance, if the yards and manure piles are on the side away from the house, as they should be.

The basement type of barn, though in use to some extent, is not very popular, even on farms where it can be easily built.

The remainder of the barn may be built of several different materials, of which wood, in spite of its advancing price, is still the cheapest and most convenient.

It is always best to have the stock face to the outside. This gives them better light and ventilation and keeps the stable walls from getting splattered with manure.

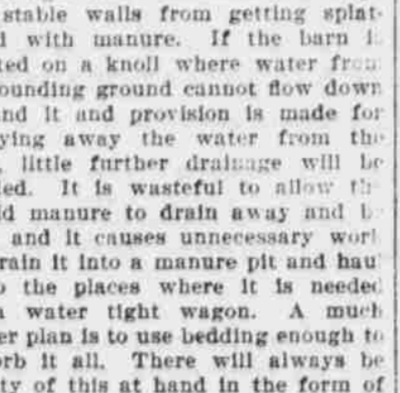

FIG. XXXII—HANDY TYPE OF INDIVIDUAL HOG HOUSE.

steers are fed another crib should be built with one end next to a string of feed bunks, so that the feeder can walk right out into them with the corn when feeding.

A good weather proof machine shed should be built on very firm ground. It may be located almost any place where it will be out of the way.

of ventilation. By having the windows swing inward from the top and providing triangular boards to close the openings at the sides the incoming current of fresh air will be directed upward against the ceiling and distributed over the stable without causing a draft.

In case there are many dairy cows or young animals to be fed a silo is almost a necessity. It should be located at the end of the barn nearest the cow stable in order to lessen the work of feeding.

A silo sixteen feet in diameter and thirty feet high is about the right size for a 100 acre farm. The diameter should always be small enough so that two or three inches can be fed off the top each day.

For the young stock, fattening cattle and sheep cheap sheds furnish ample shelter. These can be made of common boards well battened, with strong cedar posts for a framework.

These sheds should be on high, well drained ground and must be kept well bedded. When this is done they are fully as good as a more expensive shelter.

For the man who is making a specialty of hogs the "colony system" of hog houses is probably the best. For the average farmer, however, the extra amount of work which this system involves more than outweighs its advantages.

Little pigs need a great deal of sunlight and this, together with the liability of hogs to become diseased, makes it imperative that the hog house be provided with plenty of windows.

The floor, like that of the barn, should be of cement. It is a good plan to extend it out about twenty feet on each side to make feeding floors where the hogs can be fed and watered without getting in the mud.

A corner crib should be located close to one end of the feeding floors, so as to save work when hogs are fattening.

When you go to some entertainment and sit behind one of the enormous hats, which the ladies are wearing now, you feel like Robinson Crusoe on the desert island—shut off from the world, for you see for the time being, nothing but hat.

The large stores are having orchestral concerts every Saturday evening, to draw the people, and the holiday trade seems to be good.

Eight thousand acres, all under ditch, with water rights. The very cream of the golden goose Lake Valley. All level except many farms ago—far less or one on top plan to farmers who can give proper references. These lands are the choicest in the valley.
