CREED MCKENDREE C. H. MCKENDREE wishes to an announce that his services are at the disposal of the purchasers of the land at the Oregon Valley Land Company's Sale in Oregon. For two years Mr. McKendree was rental agent, having charge of all the lands embraced in the Military Road Grant, which was cut up and sold by the O. V. L. Co. In that capacity he familiarized himself with every tract of land on the grant, and can tell you from personal knowledge the value of each and every tract, both as to location and quality, and renting value. In addition Mr. McKendree knows the stockmen and who rented every portion of these lands during the past two years-he knows whom to see to rent each tract this year. For a uniform fee of five ($5.00) dollars per tract regardless of size, Mr. McKendree will render a report giving location, quality and the value, and will find you a renter if the land is rentable. All requests for information must be accompanied by $5.00, other wise no answer will be returned. REMEMBER, Mr. McKendree does not have to inspect the land, and render a "fire" look report; he has the books classifying every tract, and knows what it rented for last year-he has been over every foot of the grant, he can find you a renter.

I also wish to announce that I will attend to the payment of the taxes for all contract holders; group their lands for renting, leasing or selling for the period of one year from the 15th day of March, 1910, for a fee of $1.00 per contract. All contract holders wishing to avail themselves of his offer will mail to the undersigned a description of their tract and lot number, together with the fee above mentioned. Reference-Any bank or business man in Lakeview. Address C. H. MCKENDREE Lakeview, Oregon.

The Wars of Our Country

VI.-French and Indian War-Part II.

By Allen Payton Terhune

YOUNG man, sick almost unto death, lay on his tent bed one early autumn day in 1759, feverishly explaining to a group of officers a plan which was destined to change the map of America. The invalid was Major General James Wolfe, who, though only thirty-two, was in charge of the most important campaign of the French and Indian war. His life's greatest hour and its end were close at hand.

The British government had planned to close the long war by striking a blow at the very heart of France's power in America. Quebec was the chief French stronghold. If it could be captured Canada must fall and France's grip on the new world be forever shaken off. But Quebec was considered impossible of capture. Commander in Chief Montcalm in person commanded its garrison. Its "upper town" was situated on the Heights of Abraham, about 300 feet above the St. Lawrence river. The heights were almost everywhere too steep to climb, and a heavy guard was posted along the top.

As it was, Wolfe landed on the Isle of Orleans, below Quebec, on June 27 with 8,000 men. He was reinforced by forces under Generals Townshend and Murray. The opening weeks of the campaign were promising for the English. They took Point Levee, opposite Quebec, and from it poured a cannonade into the city. An attack on the French position near the base of the upper town a few days later resulted in a crushing defeat to the English and the loss of 500 of their men. Wolfe spent the next two months seeking in vain for some means of capturing the "upper town," but every scheme came to nothing. At last weary and exposure brought on a dangerous fever, and the young general lay for weeks between life and death.

While he was slowly recovering Wolfe sent for his officers and revealed to them a course of action he had formed. He had decided on creeping secretly up the Heights of Abraham along a steep, little known path at a point where the cliff was so precipitous as to seem to need no sentinel to guard it, and thus to transport his army to the Plains of Abraham and attack the city from the rear. It was a desperate man's desperate plan. Wolfe rose from his sickbed on the night of Sept. 12 to carry it through. He and his army roved in small boats with muffled oars up the river to a cove under the heights. Then, hanging on by bushes and vines that projected from the rock, they crawled in single file up the side of the cliff until they had reached the plains above. At dawn on Sept. 13 a white faced aid rushed into Montcalm's presence with the news that 5,000 English stood in battle array outside the city walls. He marched out against the invaders and met them in battle on the open plain. The fight was furious and was the climax and decisive blow of the whole seven years' war.

Wolfe placed his army to meet the French attack and ordered his men not to fire until the foe should be within forty yards of them. Thus, as the French came on, a fearful rifle blast at close quarters swept their ranks. Another and another volley followed. The French lines crumpled in confusion. Then, at the crucial moment, Wolfe gave the order to charge. The English, with bayonets fixed, hurled themselves against the demoralized French battalions.

Wolfe, leading the charge, was wounded in the wrist. Shifting his sword to his other hand, he continued at the head of his men. A second bullet struck him without checking his onrush. A third plowed through his breast, mortally wounding him.

"Lift me up," he panted to the officers who caught his falling body in their arms. "The men mustn't see that I am down. The day is ours. We must keep it!" The French before that wild bayonet charge broke and fled in panic. Montcalm was slain fighting. Five days later Quebec surrendered. The backbone of the war was broken. The next year Montreal was captured and the conflict was practically at an end. England's power in North America was now supreme.

ARTHUR W. ORTON Register The foregoing notice will be published in the Lake County Examiner, a weekly newspaper printed in Lakeview Oregon for a period of not less than thirty days prior to date last herein mentioned.

There are many reasons why you should read what it says 52 times each year. It is free to tell the truth. It will oppose the encroachment of special privileges upon the people's rights. It will call the roll on public men and measure and inform you how your congressmen work and vote. It will criticize the executive branch of government from the highest to the lowest, if in its judgment the peoples interests are not protected. It will spread the gospel of ideal home life through the Women's Department. It will be conservative when good things are to be conserved, and radical when bad things are to be exposed.
