ROOSEVELT IS IN THE RING AGAIN

Denies the Report That He Will Support Poindexter for Senate

NEW YORK, July 6.-Colonel Theodore Roosevelt today declared that he did not discuss the Ballinger controversy when Congressman Miles Poindexter of Washington conferred with him yesterday at Oyster Bay. The declaration was made in a formal statement issued today from Roosevelt's office at the Outlook. The report referred to was in effect that former President Roosevelt will aid Representative Miles Poindexter insurgent, in his contest against friends of Secretary Ballinger for the Republican nomination for the United States Senate from State of Washington.

According to the story Roosevelt made clear it by implication that he will support Poindexter, who seeks to take the place of Senator Piles in the United States Senate. The announcement came following the conference between Roosevelt and Poindexter yesterday. In denying the above statement the following was issued: "Roosevelt will see many senators, congressmen, assemblymen and other public men representing all phases of public opinion," the statement says. He declines to be responsible for any statements except those he makes himself.

"He has said nothing, and intends to say nothing, regarding any contest for nomination. Regarding the conference with Congressman Poindexter I will say I was pleased to find his past record regarding conservation and similar subjects was in hearty concord with mine. "I did not express to him any opinions regarding senatorial nomination, and Poindexter did not ask me for any. I do not believe Poindexter was responsible for any statement in the morning papers except as I have indicated. We did not discuss political questions in regard to the northwest and we did not touch upon the Ballinger affair."

Eternal Youth

Long before aged Ponce de Leon set out in search of the waters of eternal youth and ever since that time man has been striving to discover some means by which his allotted time on earth could be prolonged. We laugh pittingly at the old Spaniard, who felt sure that somewhere, hidden in an obscure part of the world, there was a crystal spring, the waters of which would restore the human body and preserve it for all time. But are we, in our day, much wiser? Every day we read of someone trying some new fad which will make him "live a hundred years." At first we laugh, but we find ourselves watching the experiment no matter how radical and foolish it may seem, with a secret hope that it may be successful.

Some of these seekers after long life get "back to nature," others get as far away from nature as possible, but nature, in the end, conquers us that it is neither to be shattered nor neglected. It is inexorable. The other day there came from a small town in the Sierras the story of an old man who has passed more than his allotted time on earth going out into the wilderness to eat nuts and berries and to live as much like an animal as possible. It may be that he will live many years longer, but what will those years bring him? We might all emulate the tree squirrel and gain a few more years on earth, but is the compensation worth it? Of what use would those few years be to ourselves or to the world?

Kissless San Jose

An imitation as old as the Garden of Eden is under fire in San Jose. Some enterprising young women profess to see lurking in the "kiss" the germs of tuberculosis, cancer, pneumonia, etc., etc. Hence the young man whose heart is aflame with passions asked to express his osculatory feelings on his fiancee's forehead, her ear, or the palm of her hand—anywhere but where nature intended. So seriously has this fad taken hold of the fair sex of our town that an organization has been formed, the pledge of which requires its members to refrain from kissing in the good old-fashioned way.—San Jose Mercury.

His Lesson in Golf.

A prominent business man not long since became afflicted with a bad case of "golftitis"—that is, he joined the army of cranks at the game, wanted to play all the time, talk of nothing else, etc. As is the case with all "duffers," he had his troubles at the start, and the way he fired questions at his friends was a caution. His golf acquaintances accommodatingly replied with all sorts of remedies, until finally the bewildered one got his stenographer to jot them down. One friend's advice included three points—first, keeping the eye on the ball; second, the necessity of hitting the ball with an easy stroke, and, third, the use of a rocking horse to develop the stroke. The fact that the friend had a keen sense of humor did not occur to the tyro until later. He immediately purchased a large rocking horse and after business hours seated himself astride the fiery charger and swung at the ball, which was securely fastened to the floor by a strong cord. He has learned a thing or two since. The hobbyhorse is no more, and he has vowed to get square with "Mr. Joker" if it takes a thousand years.—New York Tribune.

Subduing a Bully.

A writer in a Vladivostok paper tells of an encounter he once witnessed on a Siberian train between a lady and a nobleman. When the train pulled up at Tsitkar, in Manchuria, a Manchu noble who had bullied all his fellow passengers, alighted at the station restaurant after warning them that he would decapitate any of them who took his seat. During his absence a smartly dressed young Russian lady entered the car and, despite the alarmed expostulations of its occupants, calmly appropriated the seat. When the noble returned he flew into a passion and advanced threateningly with his curved sabre drawn. But the young woman coolly covered him with a shining revolver. "Do you take us for a pack of cowardly mandarins?" she exclaimed, and then, pointing to her feet, she remarked, "Here is your place, my hero." The Manchu noble surrendered and sat at her feet for the rest of the journey.

Hugo and the Barber.

When Victor Hugo lived in Paris in the Place Royale he used to be shaved by a barber named Brassier. A friend of the poet asked the barber one day if he was busy. "I hardly know which way to turn," was the reply. "We have to dress the hair of thirty ladies for soles and balls." And M. Brassier showed the list to his friend. A few days after the friend returned and inquired about the thirty ladies. "Ah, monsieur," said the barber sadly, "I was not able to attend half the number, and I have lost many good customers through M. Victor Hugo." It appears that the poet when about to be shaved was suddenly inspired and seized the first piece of paper he could find to write a poem. Hugo hastily left the shop with his unfinished verses, on the back of which were the names and addresses of the thirty ladies, many of whom waited in vain for their coiffeur.

Used the Wrong Gender.

A Frenchman with an imperfect knowledge of English was once called upon for an after dinner speech. He struggled along manfully for a few minutes, managing to turn one or two good phrases. Finally he excused himself from further effort by saying, "I will no longer cockroach on your time." An Englishman sitting next to him at the table remarked: "Your speech was dooced clever, bah Jove! But you used the wrong word at the close, don't you know. You should have said 'I will no longer henroach upon your time.'" "I see," said the Frenchman. "I used the wrong gender."—Exchange.

A Curious Stone.

A curious stone is the alexandrite. It is a dark green stone that is polished, cut and set, very like a fine topaz or amethyst, in large showy rings surrounded by diamonds. By the light of day the alexandrite has no special beauty save its fine luster, but directly a shaft of artificial light strikes the dull stone deep gleams of red flash out of the green, and under the gas or in the freelight one ignorant of this vagary would instantly pronounce it a ruby.

Keeping Up Appearances.

Husband (suddenly waking up at dead of night)—What in the world was that noise? Wife (calmly)—It's all right, dear. The guests of the Moneybags' ball are just coming home, and I slipped down and gave our front door a slam, so the neighbors would think we were there.—New York Journal.

He Found It Was.

Judge (to prisoner)—You are charged with having seriously injured your wife by inclosing her in a folding bed. What have you to say for yourself? Prisoner—Your honor, I wished to see if it was possible to shut her up.

The Rescue.

The Major—What's this I hear, David, about your nearly saving a man from drowning? David—I did save 'im from drownin', only the life buoy 'it 'im on the 'ead and killed 'im.—London Tatler.

Did You See It Before.

Miss Maud—This is a lovely gown, but I haven't seen it before? Mrs. Woodside—No, I think not. I have only worn it a very few smart affairs this season.

MANY CLAIMING TIMBER CLAIMS

Strenuous Times Reported Over in Klamath on the First of July

Klamath Chronicle—W H Wampler came in Saturday night from his home on the Upper Klamath lake. He reports strenuous times the night of the 10th of June for a number of people of the country were out to make an effort to secure one of the choice timber claims which were thrown open for entry on the 1st of this month.

About 10 claims were thrown open for entry on this date and no less than 50 people were standing on the line and tacked up their notices. These were some of the best timber claims in that part which is 36-7 south of Odessa and near the Jackson County line, and a prearranged signal of three pistol shots at the stroke of twelve was to be the starter for those waiting the opening to place their notices on the claims they were after. At the signal all made a dash for some tree on the claim and tacked up notices of taking. Several different parties put up notices on the same quarter sections and it is believed a big fight will be made over some of the locations.

The date for filing on these is August 1st and in the meantime those who posted their notices will get busy and make some improvements there on. Some of them went to work before daylight of the morning of the timber for the foundation of a house and others are getting supplies and will make their home right on the land until the time for filing at the Lakeview land office.

Benson is Candidate

According to a letter received in this city by a friend of the chief executive, Governor Frank W. Benson expects to file his declaration of intention to become a candidate for reelection to the office of secretary of state within a few days, says the Salem Statesman.

He states that he is getting along nicely, that he is much improved in health, and that he desires to return home as soon as possible. It is probable that he will arrive in the city about July 20. To some of the governor's friends news that he would be a candidate for re-election to the office of secretary of state came as a surprise, as it was reported by some that he would not enter the political field again owing to his health, but he seems to have regained his to a certain extent from the optimistic tone of his communication, and he will become a very active candidate.

The Annual Exodus

On a single day recently eleven liners left New York carrying over 5000 passengers bound for Europe. For the first five and a half months of the year, before the vacation season set in, the outbound passenger steamships carried 22,213 persons. At a conservative estimate, it may be figured that half a million people will have sailed for Europe during the current year. It would be interesting to know how large a percentage of these travelers were simply on pleasure bent, and still more interesting to discover how many were bound to spend their vacations in Europe know anything of their own country.

Burned-Over Timber

The outcome of an experiment to be tried with burned-over timber in Coos County by the Sante Fe Railroad will be watched with interest throughout the Pacific Northwest. If successful, it will mean that large areas of forest, formerly considered useless, will become valuable for the burned-over timber yet remaining. The Sante Fe has contracted for 1200 cedar piling from such a tract in Coos County. If the charred piling proves a success much of the same material will be bought by the Sante and a wide market will be found for this now apparently worthless timber.
