REPUBLICAN PLATFORM

The Republicans of Oregon, in assembly convened, reaffirm their faith in the principles of the Republican party, and with pardonable pride point to the record of its achievement.

We reaffirm our faith in the principles of representative government and in the maintenance of political parties, believing that no party can maintain its identity or exert its proper influence for good government without organization.

As the representatives of the Republican party of Oregon we find our warrant for this assembly in the express provision of the preamble of the direct primary law which reads as follows:

"Political parties are useful and necessary. The method of naming candidates for elective public offices by political parties and voluntary political organizations is the best plan yet found for placing before the people the names of qualified and worthy citizens from whom the electors may choose the officers of our government.

"Every political party and every voluntary political organization has the same right to be protected from the inference of persons not identified with it has its own publicity avowed members, that the government of the state has to protect itself from the inference of persons who are not known and registered as electors."

We commend the sentiment of the assembly the word of Governor Charles E. Hughes:

"I believe in party organization and I desire to see it strong, efficient and representative."

And the expression of Theodore Roosevelt that:

"Voters should be guaranteed the right to determine within the ranks of her respective organization who the candidates of the parties shall be."

We reaffirm our faith in the principle of representative government and the maintenance of political parties, believing that no party or association of men can maintain its identity or exert its influence for the principles, it expresses without organization; we believe in the wisdom of council, and as free citizens of a free government we enjoy the constitutional right as members of the Republican party to assemble for purpose of adopting a platform, considering of candidates in making recommendations to the people and performing such other duties as may be deemed wise and expedient; and that any infringement upon such right is a denial of the wisdom of the founders of our government, both state and national, and against the rights guaranteed by our constitution and a violation of the real spirit of the direct primary laws, with the fundamental principle of which we are in hearty accord, and believe it should be supported and obeyed.

We favor the creation of the office of lieutenant-governor of the State, who shall perform the duties of the governor in case of his inability to act.

We favor the abolishment of all useless and unnecessary offices, boards, commissions and clerkships and for just and economical expenditure of public moneys.

We are opposed to the pending bill providing for the election of delegates to the national conventions of the Democratic parties at the expense of the tax payers. These delegates are not public officials, but are representatives of their respective parties and the taxpayers of the state should not be called upon to pay the railroad fare, hotel bills and other expenses of these trips.

We favor only such conservation of the public resources as will best develop and settle the country.

We unqualifiedly endorse the administration of President Tatt, and point with pride to the fulfillment by the national Republican party of the pledge contained in its last platform.

We point with pride to the history of the Republican party and to the capacity of the party, so often demonstrated, to solve public questions and to legislate and administer the government in the interest of the whole people. We affirm our combined loyalty to the principles and policies of our party and we mutually pledge our efforts to the effort necessary to strengthen the party organization and to elect those officers who are loyal to its principles.

COYOTE PROOF FENCE

The inclosure of sheep range within a coyote-proof fence has been tried in Colorado by F. H. Taylor, of Mancos, with highly satisfactory results. An experiment begun by the U. S. department of agriculture on the Wallowa national forest in Oregon to discover whether sheep could be advantageously pastured within such an enclosure, led Mr. Taylor to give the new method a trial. The outcome is set forth in a letter to the department as follows:

"After reading the description of your coyote-proof fence in Oregon I constructed a fence enclosing about 500 acres in the same manner. The fence was constructed during the fall of 1908, and in the spring of 1909, and 1910 one thousand head of ewes were lambled in this enclosure."

In the vernacular of the herder, "one hundred per cent of the lambs were saved," that is a lamb to each ewe, "and one man did all the work. I think the per cent of the lambs would have been higher but one animal, presumably a coyote, was inside when the fence was constructed. It was impossible to capture this animal even with hounds. Some of the herders thought the animal was not a coyote, but since coyote tracks were found in several places I am of the opinion that it was. Whatever the animal was, it raised its young inside the enclosure."

Connecting his loss with the rapacity of this animal, Mr. Taylor says:

"A great many of the lambs were killed and a small hole eaten behind the foreleg the remainder of the carcass being untouched. On the land outside of the enclosure it required the services of three men and a pack of hounds to care for one thousand ewes, and only 95 per cent of the lambs were saved. This per cent could not have been saved without the assistance of the hounds."

I consider this fence a splendid investment, since it really pays for itself in three years. On the other hand, it is often difficult and sometimes impossible to get men during the lambing season. For this reason the money value of the fence can hardly be estimated."

The department of agriculture entered upon the experiment on enclosing sheep range within a fence which would turn back animals in belief that this method would save forage as well as stock and wages. The Oregon enclosure carried more sheep than an equal area of range of the same quality outside, produced a heavier lamb crop, heavier sheep and more wool and at the same time resulted in better condition of the range itself. These advantages are due to the different behavior of sheep pastured within such an enclosure from that of sheep herded in an ordinary way.

When a band of sheep moves about in charge of a herder, it must be kept from scattering much. As a result, much of the forage is wasted through trampling. Within an enclosure, however the sheep soon learn to spread out and shift for themselves. Under these conditions it is not to be wondered at that a given area supports more sheep, puts them in better condition and suffers less wear and tear. The success of the new method, depends on the extermination of all dangerous animals within the enclosure and on the maintenance of a fence which will keep off outside attacks.

Mr. Taylor believes the Wallowa plan of construction is open to improvement in particular. He advocates putting barbed wire on the ground before the woven wire is unrolled and stapling it down. I expect to build another enclosure soon his letter concluded "and will have a barbed wire around the enclosure and have the men place their feet on the wire and press it close to the ground and staple it. With the fence already constructed it seemed almost impossible to get the wire as close to the ground as is necessary, on account of the uneven surface."

Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture has been in Oregon seeking information in regard to the settlement of lands included in the forest reserves of the state. He plans to have the reserves re-mapped and the boundaries established in an accurate way. It is said that much land included in the reserves that should not be, and when the maps are completed 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 acres now in reserves in this state will be opened up for settlement.

Be sure and take a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with you when starting on your trip this summer. It cannot be obtained on board the trains or steamers. Changes of water and climate often cause sudden attacks of diarrhoea and it is best to be prepared. Sold by all good dealers.
