Mrs. Spencer had dropped in on the bride of four months. She had had her eye on young Mrs. Gray for some time and was now prepared to shatter ber idol.

After observing that there were five cases of married couples separating recor ed in the paper this morning she | 150 are now caught each year went on to add that the way husbands were carrying on these days was something perfectly awful.

"I never read about those things," replied the young wife. "Of course there are good and bad husbands, but my Billy is one of the very best."

"Y-e-s," said Mrs. Spencer grudging-Ir and with a look of pity in her eyes. "I thought my husband was almost an angel for several years, and then he was arrested for baving five wives."

"But Billy is different, you know." "Perhaps. On Llonday I was in the telephone booth at Calder's drug store ; its is impracticable. to talk with my daughter. It's a double booth, you know. Just as I was ready to ring up, your husband entered the other booth and called up a young woman and had a conversation with ber."

"But he didn't say anything to me about it," replied the wife. "What name did he call the lady by?"

"There were two of them before he got through, and he called them Lou and Jessie. He said he'd have more money for them soon. Mrs. Gray. don't go on deceiving yourself as I did.'

"But-but I don't think he knows any ladies by those names," faltered the wife as her eyes filled with tears. "You mean he hasn't told you that

"What can you do? You can be in the telephone booth at noon today; you can hear him tajk; you can get sight of him; you can go home and pack your trunk; you can stand right up to him and tell him that his perfidy is discovered."

At noon young Mrs. Gray was in one of the telephone booths at Calder's. Up to the moment she started from home she had said to herself that she wouldn't go.

She had been waiting in the booth only five minutes when a step she knew entered the store. Then some one sat down in the other booth. Her heart was throbbing as central was rung up and a voice called: "Give me 2043 Jackson."

suppose it was he who told you." My bewilderment was increasing rather than subsiding, for I noticed a resemblance, though a very faint one. between the lady before me and a figure in the picture to which she referred. In fact, I was dumfounded. 1 did nothing but stare at her. She went on speaking in her quick, excited way, her eyes filling with tears:

"It was all my fault. I urged him to take the money and speculate for me. The stocks went down. Ten days after the loss was reported to me by the brokers he had learned of it and made it good out of his own pocket. Indeed, he wrote me that there was a profit. The stupid brokers called on me for margin during his absence, at the height of the panic. He had distinctly told them to look to him and by no means communicate with me. But why did you call your picture 'Retribution?' At the moment I reproached him he had ordered a check sent me for $6,000. I received it after he had gone.'

A light was beginning to break in upon my brain. I had read of cases where persons had fancied themselves the subjects of artists' work, and it struck me that I had met with an instance. I was interested in the lady's story. Might I not be of service in restoring to her a person she had wronged? The picture, too, corresponded with the scene to which she referred. A woman was reproaching a man who had wronged her, while he stood with bowed bead, receiving his chastisement. The woman was the principal figure; the man was in shadow and his face not distinctly visible. I concluded to temporize with her. "And did he not defend himself?" I asked.

"No; he simply stood and looked at me in astonishment. His figure in your picture doesn't show his demeanor at all."

"He left you with no explanation?" "None whatever. Ten minutes after weakness and general debility. But Electric Bitters never fail to destroy his departure the postman left his letter containing his check for what 1 "Three bottles completely cured me of a very severe attack of malaria,"

A Few Letters to Many People

Advertising Government Homesteads pays -if I can produce the goods. That's the secret of all advertising. A man cannot afford to make a single mistatement or even exaggerate. When 1 claim to place you on 320 acres of good agricultural land I cannot afford to allow you to select land in Goose Lake where the water is ten feet deep. You must under the homestead laws personally inspect the deep. You must under the homestead laws personally inspect the land; must actually go on it and familiarize yourself with every 40 acre tract. I can show you the land but you must do the choosing. Is there any reason for you being deceived when you do the selecting? My four years experience in soil observation compels me to show you the best land obtainable onder the Government Land Acts. Its level valley land or sometimes slightly rolling; the soil is of great depth water is obtained at depths that range from 10 to 55 feer. It may vary that much on the same section of hord and the quality of the water on every homestead that I have located where a well has been completed is exceptionally pure. The climate of the valleys is such that they have been used as a winter range for sheep, cattle and horses which feed on the native wild grasses exclusively. The snow seldom preventing grazing and the clear cold a r and bright sonshine give a tone to the atmosphere which is much healthier than in a citrus fruit belt. The weather never gets extremely cold as we know It in the Mississipot Valey States above Southern Missouri points, neither does the summer days equal the heat of the states mentioned. There never has been a sunstroke in these valleys. With soil, water and climate combining, what is the reason these lands are open to entry and that no one has taken them before now? Because of sever-al reasons: first-the valleys in question were remote from any railroad transportation. It seemed too far for the average man to travel beyond railroad- and he could not see how he could profitably till the soil without transportation for his products. That's the rea-son why I have had to pa 2% cents per pound for barley at Lake-view and 4 ents per pound at Christmas Lake. People feared they could not sell the product so the supply has been insufficient to meet the demands of our rapidly increasing traffic by wagon or stage. $30,000,000 is thing spent by Oregon Railroads and soon one or more lines will traverse this valley. Prices will then come down but you can ship your surplus crops to the outside markets. S cond-No one u, to I entered the field ever tried to tell you all about the many opportunities in this section of Oregon 1 began four years ago and I am at it yet. I could see then many things that have come to pass slice. For instance: in twelve townships in Ceristimas Lake valley at that time there was but one single homestend. Today I could poSsibly locate twenty-five people on 160 nore claim- or half that number on 320 acre claims in these townshipt Over 1000 entries have been made in this valley alone since I broughs it to the attention of settlers. There must be some attraction in a place so far from a rairoad, son't you think so? It is the last beaf fertile place open to the homesteader with the prospect of railroads in the near future. In these twelve townships today are five post-offices, a couple of church congregations that hold meetings in the school houses, six or more schools and other buildings, five mercantile establishments and a couple of small hotels and feed barns together with hundreds of miles of wire fences and hundreds of places where little or much improvements have been made. The valley is dotted over with cabins raceing from that of the most lowly to the most subseantial bungalow type of home. There are few large barns as yet as stock needs very little siciter and money is being spent on other improvements. The man that knew this valley four years ago and has not seen it since will rub his eyes when he comes back in a couple of yerrs from now at the latest and rides there on a comfortable train, but he won't be the man that will make money out of getting free hand before it is all gone. He may be able then to buy's good 320 for about $5000 at the lowest possible price of $25 per acre but.I believe that he will pay at least double that price.

Now let us reason together: you and I. Do you believe that you cau make money faster than you can by securing a piece of this land now and holding it even for $25 per acre? In the same township where I located my last party of settlers a 160 acre claim patented sold last spring for $'0 per a re. It's worth $5.50 more now besides the improvements which are worth about $500. How about this land being worth more when the railroad comes? Well every day that you let pass without coming here and seeing this land for yourself lessens your chances. Your opportunity based upon a certainty You must not to order to realize your ambitious. Study this question but act while you are doing so. Its the man that b

"Yes, if I find him."

The lady departed somewhat comforted, but by no means confident that I would succeed in gaining for her the forgiveness of the man she had wronged.

How I found Edward Borland is a matter between me and a man I paid for doing the work. When I met Mr. Borland he supposed the meeting was cusual. «I pursued the acquaintance and invited him to my studio, where I had the picture from Martine's consplenously displayed on an easel. I watched him as he looked at it. The woman's face evidently interested him. "Where did you get your model for that figure?" he asked.

This was a beginning. Before he left my studio I had told him the story of my visitor and her illusion. When his wonder at the singular occurrence had given place to thinking on the situation between himself and the lady I naw his face harden. If I effected a reconciliation I must use the utmost adroitness.

"She was very bitter," he said, "when she supposed I had lost her money."

"Naturally." I remarked. "She gave me carte blanche to do as I thought best for her, to win or lose as the market rose or fell, and when it fell she reproached me."

"As was to be expected from any woman and as would be the result in the case of most men. Women don't possess the polse to stand that sort of thing. Granting that you were excusable for accepting such a commission. you could only expect that it would be 'heads you win, tails you lose.' "

Before he left I secured his promise to meet the lady in question in my studio the next morning. I notified her to come, and she no sooner say her former lover there than I, as an artist, caught the penitent, pleading look on her face for my next picture. I marked the first "Retribution I." and the second "Retribution II."
