

Representative Printing

If you want the public to believe that you produce or sell an article superior to that of your competitor, then your printing should convey that impression by its superiority.

If you want to impress the public with the distinctiveness of your concern or its product, then distinctiveness must be the dominant feature of the literature which represents your concern.

To combine these qualities—to make your printing representative of you and your product—is the constant study of this shop. It's the eternal fitness of things that count.

Examiner printing "fits"—and it counts—and is sold on the assumption that there's economy in quality.
