LOSE NO TIME ON OREGON TRUNK

Tracks Being Laid at Rate of Two Miles Per Day on Central Oregon Line

Tracklaying on the Oregon Trunk is progressing more rapidly than was expected, about two miles per day being the average maintained since the work was commenced. The crews have reached the Middlepost and will continue to push on as long as the weather permits. It was hoped to get down about a mile and a half of track each working day so that, even the most sanguine expectations of the engineers have been exceeded.

Very little reference has been made by bad weather, little snow having fallen and none having remained long on the ground. The weather, in fact, has been just the kind wanted for rapid work, so the foremen report, for it has been cool enough to put the tracklayers in one team for work. At the same work is now progressing tracklaying will have been laid to Crooked river bridge early in the spring.

DEATH OF WILLIAM HOLDER

The death of Mr. Holder is a distinct loss to all of Lake county and more especially to Silver Lake. Much of the progress of the northern part of Lake county is due to no small part to his efforts, and he was always working for the advancement of what he considered the best interests of his particular section. He was a writer of much more than ordinary ability, and his trenchant pen will no doubt be missed for years to come.

While his writings at times seemed to be somewhat vindictive, yet he was not of a revengeful nature and after his point had been gained or lost, as the case might be, he was perfectly willing to abide by the result.

Mr. Holder was born August 11, 1854, and during his life held numerous positions of trust. He served two terms as sheriff of Sherman county, and made good in every thing.

May he rest in peace.

INDIANAPOLIS' MAYOR.

Samuel H. Shank, Advocate of Novel Reform Method.

Samuel Lewis Shank, mayor of Indianapolis, attracted national attention recently by sentencing offending saloon keepers to go to church. Mayor Shank is a Republican and was elected recently. His term will not expire until 1914.

Flat Noses Considered Beautiful.
In ancient Persia an aquiline nose was often thought worthy of the crown, but the Sumatran mother carefully flattens the nose of her daughter. Among some of the savage tribes continual pressure is applied to the skull in order to flatten it and thus give it a new beauty.

SEARCH PARTIES QUICK TO RESCUE

There Was No Delay in Starting Out After Polk Bannister

The funeral of Polk Bannister, an account of whose death appeared in the Examiner last week, occurred Friday and was quite largely attended. His death was a severe shock to not only the community in which he lived, but also to the entire county, and the sympathy of all is extended to the bereaved relatives. He leaves a wife, a son, Perry, and daughter, Mrs. J. J. Moore, all of Paisley, and Mrs. Frank Smith, of Lakeview.

The circumstances attending Mr. Bannister's death were practically the same as outlined in the last issue of the Examiner. John Sietan, who resides near Mr. Bannister's Chewawacan ranch, first noticed the horses Tuesday morning, but supposed they belonged to some sheepman. Wednesday morning he again saw the horses, and then concluded something was wrong. Going to them he discovered one stirrup leather broken and the pack saddle under the horse's belly. He caught the saddle horse and lead it to Paisley, the other horse following. Immediately on arrival there a search party was organized and started in search of Mr. Bannister. About 4 o'clock another party started, but no trace of Mr. Bannister was found that evening. The first party remained over night at the Chewawacan ranch, while the others camped out over night. Early Thursday morning the search was renewed, which resulted in the finding of Mr. Bannister's body lodged on a rock in the river.

Mr. Bannister's saddle horse is said to be of a treacherous disposition, and indications point to the fact that the lead rope of the pack horse became entangled under her tail, with the result that she commenced backing and finally threw Mr. Bannister. It is likely that his foot caught in the stirrup, and in the following mix up received injuries that rendered him all but helpless. It seems that Mr. Bannister was able to walk for a short distance from where the accident occurred, but his strength soon failed him and he was compelled to crawl on his hands and knees. On reaching the river the ice was not of sufficient strength to bear his weight, and he was precipitated into the river where his body was subsequently found.

PRINTER MAY GO ON FLAT SALARY

Deficit of $30,000 Staring Legislature in The Face

Salem, Dec. 31--Plans are now on foot for the expected flat salary bill for the state printer, and the bill will probably be introduced early in the session. Under the proposed law the printer will receive $2400 a year.

According to the appropriation provided for in the bill, the cost of the state printing office for the first biennial period, starting in 1911, will be $63,000 for two years, but under the provisions of the bill the law will go into effect April 1, 1911, and the flat salary of the printer will start at that time.

Advocates of the measure point to the proposed appropriation of $63,300 for the two years, as against the estimate of $150,000 which is included in the budget of the secretary of state, $30,000 being a deficiency appropriation.

The act provides for a printing expert on an annual salary of $2000, and the following expenses biennially for the office:

Bookkeeper and clerical services, $2400; foreman and other employees, $24,800; incidentals and contingent expenses, $2000; purchase of paper, binding and general supplies, $25,000.

It is proposed to have the state take over the present printing plant, the governor to select three practical printers to appraise the plant, and if the present plant is undesirable, $20,000 will be appropriated to buy the equipment and materials to establish a state plant.

In addition, the bill proposes that all officers or departments that have public printing shall submit it to the expert, who will act in an advisory capacity, prescribing, to a certain extent, in what manner the work shall be done. This places responsibility large upon the expert in practically every branch of the work.

The state printer will be elected every four years, as under the present law, and in case of death or vacancy by resignation his successor shall be appointed by the governor. He is also called upon to make a quarterly report to the secretary of state.

A TARCOOLER FUNERAL.

Wood Was Scarce, but They Managed to Rig Up a Coffin.

In some of the mining districts of South Australia there is a great scarcity of wood. Consequently, if you are so foolish as to die there you must not expect to have a coffin, but must be content to be wrapped in a sack before being deposited in Mother Earth.

However, when a certain very prominent resident of a mining camp died the other people of the settlement--by the way, it was called Tarcooler, though coolness was unknown and Tarholter would have been a more suitable name--determined that he should be buried in style. So they set about getting a coffin. They made one of a sack, placed a lid on it and laid it (with the deceased inside) in an empty tent for the night.

Next morning the lid of the coffin was missing. It was afterward found that it had been stolen to make the tailboard of a butcher's cart.

However, in spite of this trifling loss the funeral was conducted with great solemnity. The coffin was much admired. It had been made out of the boxes in which the dynamite was sent to the mines. Some people might have considered that the obsequies were marred by the fact that the coffin bore in large letters on one side the legend "Keep dry," and on the other "Stow away from boilers," but that did not trouble the simple minds of the Tarcooler men--London Trib.

WORSE THAN WAR.

Infernal Regions of the Buddhists and Mohammedans.

The infernal regions of Buddhism are horrible. They comprise a great hell and 136 lesser hells. In these hells, according to the sculptures of the Buddhist temples, men are ground to powder and their dust turned into ants and flies and spiders. They are peddled in a mortar. The hungry eat red-hot iron balls. The thirsty drink molten iron.

Islamism says of the infernal regions: "They who believe not shall have garments of fire fitted for them. Boiling water shall be poured on their heads and on their skins, and they shall be beaten with maces of iron."

In the Scandinavian mythology, the mythology of Odin and Thor, we are told that "In Nastrand there is a vast and dreadful structure, with doors that face the north. It is formed entirely of the backs of serpents, wadded together like wickerwork. But the serpents' heads are turned toward the inside of the hall, and they continually send forth floods of venom, in which wade all those who commit murder or forswear themselves."

Her First Poem.

She was one of those soft eyed maidens, sweetly innocent, shy and gentle. She was unaccustomed to newspaper offices, but being ambitious, she managed to find enough courage to try winning an editor's sympathy, sympathy to be expressed by the acceptance of her poem.

"I have here," she said demurely, "a little verse I've composed. I really don't know what you'll think of it. You may not like it at all, but it's my first--that is, the first I've ever written for a newspaper--and I'd be very pleased indeed if you honestly thought it was good."

The editor kept at his work, now and then scowling, but not at the young woman especially.

"It's about a maiden tripping o'er the sea," she continued.

"What was the trouble?" asked the man behind the paper. "Couldn't she lift her feet?"--Philadelphia Times.

Slightly Mixed.

He wasn't good at conundrums, but when his turn came to ask one at a little so-lit party he thought he could remember a good one he had heard. It was the old riddle.

"Why is a woman like the ivy?"

The answer, of course, is the gallant explanation:

"Because the more you're ruined the closer she sticks."

But he got it mixed and asked:

"Why is the ivy like a woman?"

None of the ladies present could give an appropriate reply, so he himself ventured this maladrofit solution:

"Because the closer it clings, the more you're ruined."

Spoiled It For Him.

Mr. Clarke's butler had asked for a night off, for the purpose, as he explained, of attending a ball in the village. The next day Mr. Clarke asked him how he had enjoyed himself.

"Oh, pretty good, sir, thank you," was the response. "It would have been better if it hadn't a-been for the woman. I can't abide women at a ball."--New York Press.
