THE ONLY KILLING

That Troubled the Sheriff

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Jake Rodman was a sheriff in the then territory of Dakota. He had landed more desperadoes alive and dead than any other sheriff, but it must be admitted that by far the larger number were dead when captured, for very few of them could be taken alive. Besides Rodman didn't take any chances, for an officer of the law was no more immune from these people than any one else. I once asked him if he had any shrinking at killing one of them or any qualms afterward. He replied that if he had been built that way they would have landed him instead of his landing them.

"But there was one killin'," he said. 'that has troubled me ever since. I wake up nights some time and get to thinkin' about it and always feel the same sinkin' about the heart. It was this way: "Before I was made sheriff I was tleman as had come out from the east. He had been a banker or somep'n like that, but had given up the business to bring his daughter, a little gal about nineteen, who was threatened with consumption, out here, hopin' the dry air would do her good. Havin' plenty of money the natural thing fer him to do was to buy a ranch and stock it. But be didn't care nothin' about that, except to give him somep'n to do. He was bound up in his daughter Susie, just as everybody else was Talk about heart winners, Susie could slaughter more people that way than any one I ever seen. There wasn't any one on the ranch or off'n it that wouldn't swaller a dose o' lead fer

"I never could tell fist what it was about her that had this effec', but I allowed the principal part of it was that her heart went out to everybody. When they was bankerin' to do somep'n fer her she was worryin' because they was puttin' theirselves out'n their way on her account. Besides, delicate people allus attract strong ones. Susie was so frail she looked as if the fust good wind that blew would carry her away. But besides all this thur was somep'n winnin' about her that no one could reckon on.

"I got ahead of every one else with her this way: I owned a blooded mare that was as easy managed as a kitten and could git along like the wind, Nothin' Susle liked better'n to ride on horseback, but she wouldn't ride any other horse than my Kate. I used to go with her lots of times, fer her father wouldn't lot her go nione and didn't like to have her go under the care o' any one else. I was only about ten years older than Susie and unmarried; but, laws, I'd as soon calulated on makin love to some gal as ome down from heaven! But this didn't matter no hew, fer there was a young gent as had left college to go to ranchin' that Susie had met and tumbled to. In our rides together she got confidential with me and tole me all about it: tole me when the feller hisself didn't know nothin' at all about it. In fac', I was the only pusson as knowed it except the tittle gal berself.

"This young man's (Dick Walcott) ranch was a matter o' fifty miles from ourn, which was known as the Courtney ranch from Susie's father. who owned it. But Walcott used to come over quite frequent, makin' excuses all the time, to see Susie. Gosh, how the young feller was wrapt up in her! He would any time have crawled on the ground before her. She tole me she didn't let on she cared any more fer him than any one else, because she wasn't strong and healthy and wasn't willin' to pull any man down by marryin' bim. Jist think o' this angel cofidin' this to a revolver to her brain, pulled the trigrough feller like me when nobody else knowed it!

"There was one o' the herders in Mr. Courtney's employ that was a bad egg He tuk some sort o' malice agin young Walcott, I didn't know the reason at first; I jist reckoned that Walcott had treated him like the galoot he was. This herder, Jim Stiggs, was not only a powerful man, but was one o' the to tell Susie that the man she loved quickest and straightest shots I ever seen. I allus allowed that if I had a dispute with him I wouldn't do much sleepin', but would keep my right eye on him continually till the fracas was settled. I was sorry be'd turned agin Walcott, for Walcott was no match fer him whatever-more of a feller to handle books than revolvers. Mind you, I wasn't thinkin' of Walcott; I was fearful for Susie, knowin' mighty well that if anything happened to him

It would knock ber into smithereens. "Well, one day the secret of Stiggs" dislike came out with a vengeance. Susie came to me all of a flutter and a-wringin' of her hands and said:

"Jim Stiggs has left here to go to the Walcott ranch to kill Dick. Stiggs has made love to me'-

'What! That galoot made love to you? "Yes: and of course I wouldn't listen to it. He has inferred how I feel toward Dick, and he went away saying he would kill Dick this very night. Cau't you do something to stop him?

'How long has he been gone?'

" 'Nearly two hours.'

"'Why didn't you tell me before?" "'I didn't think of telling you."

"Without another word I ran to the barn and got out Kate, saddled ber, mounted and was about to ride away when Suste came up pantin'. She put her arms about Kate's neck and said. Kate, dear, take him in time to save him-for my sake-and I'll love you

"Not wishin' to lose time I broke away from her. I seen blood on her lips, and I knowed the excitement or the runnin' to the barn or both had brought on a bemorrhage.

" 'Don't kill Kate,' I heard Susie say, and that was the last, for then I was out o' hearin' "I leaned down on the mare's neck and patted her and said. 'Yer doin' this for Susie, and I know you'll do

"I reckon she understood, for she Jist got down to a steady guit that she could keep all day and reel off the miles while she was a doin' in. I knowed Walcott's life depended on my gittin' there as soon as Stiggs, fer I didn't reckon Stiggs would give his enemy any advantage. His way was to ride up behind a man, make a show o' givin' him a chanct by callin' out to him and shoot him before he could

"Stiggs had got a good start o' me, and he never rode a poor horse. But he didn't know any one was after him. Nevertheless it would be nip and tuck with me to overhaul him. Kate kept her steady gait till we got within about five miles o' the Walcott ranch, when workin' on a ranch owned by a gen- across the grazin' ground I saw Stiggs ridin' along at a good pace. Then I said to my mare:

"'Now or never, Kate. Remember what Susie said to you."

"She knowed what I was a sayin', and she got over the ground like a greyhound. We was within a mile o' the ranch when, strikin' a soft bit o' ground, the mare stumbled and fell, shootin' me over her head. I tried to pull her up, but it was no use. Her left foreleg was broke.

"I used my own legs the rest o' the I neared the ranch in time to see Stiggs lettin' down the bars to go As bad luck would have it, there was Walcott standin' with his back to Jim, watchin' a man who was puttin' a horse through his paces. I seen Stiggs remount and ride up toward the man in the yard, drawin' his revolver at the same time.

"Before startin', thinkin there might be occasion for a long range shot, I'd hooked a Winchester to my saddie and brought it from where Kate fell. Stiggs must 'a' been 1,200 to 1,500 yards away, but I knew Wal cott's life depended on my bringin' his enemy down at that distance. I took a good aim, fired, and Stiggs tumbled off'n his horse."

The narrator paused to light a pipe "I suppose," I said, "this is the kill ing you referred to that has always troubled you. You excused the man because he acted from love."

"I troubled about killin' Jim Stiggs! Not much. It's another killin' that bothers me. As soon as I seen Stiggs drop I went back to Kate. She had saved the man Susle loved, and Susle had told me not to kill her. But there was Kate tyin on her side with a broken leg. There's but one thing to do with a horse in that condition-shoot him. Kate when she saw me comin' whitenied, and when I reached her there was a mighty sad look in her eye. She was an intelligent animal and knowed that it was all up with

"I tuk my revolver from its case. Kate glanced at it and at me. If ever a horse said in plain tanguage 'Don't kill Kate' that horse said it. Or was it because I was seein' the little girl standin' there with the drop of blood on her lip-the death mark-and heard her say it ag'in?

"I scarcely think I'm the kind o' man to be chicken hearted. Leastaways I wouldn't mind cuttin' a deer's throat after shootin' it when it looks appealin' like outer its soft eyes, but I showed the white feather at shootin' Kate. And I never could tell whether it was most because I loved Kate or whether I was conscience struck at havin' to go back on the little gal that tole me not to kill her. I walked away fer a few rods, then turned and come back. When I did that I could a blowed her head off. I put the muzzle o' my ger and fired. All the while she was lookin' at me as much as to say 'Much obleeged

"I walked four talles to a house, borryed a spade, went back and buried Then I walked all the way back to the Courteny ranch. I wasn't in a burry to git there neither. Leastaways I wouldn't 'a' been if it wasn't had been saved. Seemed as if I'd only done half what she wanted me to do. I had stopped Stiggs from doin' any damage, but I had killed Kate.

"Waal, when I got to the ranch I seen sump'n had happened, Everybody was lookin' solium. They tole me Susie had been havin' hemorrhages. They tole me, too, that she was waitin' fer me to come back, and I was to go right up to her as soon as I come. When I went into the room where she was she was gaspin'. I knowed it was all over with her. She asked with her eyes if I'd got there in time. I said right off, 'It's all right.' She looked happy fer a minute, then managed to say: "Kate?

"Then I told the allfiredest lie I ever tole in my life:

'She's all right too.'

"Susie died soon after that.

"The killin o' Kate is the only one o' my killin's that wears on me. But I don't know exactly what the reason is, whether it's because o' Kate or beeguse o' Susie."

MADRAS IS AFTER U. S. LAND OFFICE

Wants Parts of Lakeview and The Dalles Districts

Madras wants to have that town made a United States land office, and the matter has been taken up with Senator Chamberlain, to see what can be done to that end. The purpose is understood not to be to eliminate The Dalles as a Government land office, but to carve out a new district, taking a portion of The Dulles and a portion of the Lakeview districts, Senator Oscales of Honor-Lakeshore is seen the Lakeview districts, Senator No. 77, D. 61 H., A. O. U. W., Meets and Chamberlain has written the Portland. Commercial Club of the fact that the Madras Commercial Club has made the appeal, and that action will be taken in the premises at the earliest oppor-

The Dalles has in past years been the nunrest railway station to the center of the great land district which that city controlled, but since the Deschutes lines have been completed to Madras, the people of that aggressive town believe that the matter of taking public land should be made a less expenzive and more convenient function. Madras is near the heart of a large area of pubic land. In The Dalles district alone there are 2,481,983 acres of public domain, while the Lakeview district has a much greater acreage of untakes land. The greatest rush witnessed in Central Oregon is to get into these ragions, where reclamation projects and dry farming promises to make provisions for several hundred thousand people.

A Bright Booklet

The Oregon legislature of 1911 is discussed pro and con by some of the members in a book entitled "Behind the Scenes at Salem" and published by Carl Smith and H. P. Edward, legislative correspondents for the Portland The authors undertake to tell some of the "behind the scenes occurances," forming interesting and instructive reading for the voter. All of the important bills are taken up in detail and the reader is made intimately acquainted with the reasons of polities involved in their passage or defeat. Conclusions are presented on each member of the Seuate and House, the authors declaring they have no friends to favor, or foes to punish and that the opinions are based upon facts as shown in various roll calls on the bills presented.

Every family and especially those who reside in the country should be provided at all times with a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment. There is no telling when it may be wanted in case of an accident or emergency. It is most excellent in all cases of rhumatism, sprains and bruises. Sole by all good dealers.
