Lakeview, Oregon, Thursday, May 4, 1911

Senator Chamberlain's committee assignments are agriculture, military affairs, territories, public lands, expenditures in interior department, Pacific railways, Philippines, Indian affairs and irrigation.

Senator Bourne has fared exceedingly well in committee assignments. He is chairman of the postoffice committee and also secured a place on the appropriation's committee. His other assignments are, commerce, fisheries, public buildings and grounds, printing, railroads and woman suffrage.

It is reported that the Dutch have taken possession of Palmas island, 60 miles southeast of Mindanao, lowered the American colors and substituted therefor the flag of Holland. It is understood that Washington does not intend to protest against the action of the Dutch, the American government regarding the island as valueless.

Postmaster-General Hitchcock is confident that "penny postage" is a probability of the near future as the result of reduction in the $17,600,000 postal deficit which existed when he took charge of the Postoffice Department. He has made a statement to this effect in acknowledging letters received regarding the postal situation.

The Oregon delegation in Congress has been requested to work for the creation of another land office, either at Prineville, Bend or Madras. The members desire that a general canvass be issued to bring to them a reflection of sentiment throughout the regions affected, thus enabling them to act in accordance with the popular will. Any one familiar with the workings of the U. S. land office knows perfectly well that there is no need of a new office at Bend, Prineville, or any other place, aside from using it as a factor in getting up a "boom."

In commenting upon the forthcoming visit of the State Desert Land Board, the Paisley Press says relative to the project in that vicinity: "The irrigation company, too weak and poor to fight, procrastinates and gets extension after extension. Nobody cares to interfere. To force the company to relinquish its rights and throw the land open for settlement would do no good for without water for irrigation it would not be worth a dollar an acre. The hands it would fall into would be more helpless than those of the company."

The only solution to the problem is to comprehend all the lands of the Chewaucan Cattle Company and all the other land in the valley under one grand irrigation scheme. Then 100,000 acres of the finest land in the world would support a large and thriving population and make a tract unequalled in every way by any other tract in any portion of the state of Oregon.

Want Their Children Thieves.

The Kakhia Kheis, a tribe that inhabits the country of the Khyber pass, in northern India, are thieves and consider thieving a most honorable occupation. A young woman of the Kakhia Kheis will not look at a young man who would like to become her husband unless he is proficient in the art. The dearest wish of a mother is that her little boy may become a cunning thief. Every child is consecrated, as it were, at its birth to crime. A hole is made in the wall similar to that made by a burglar, and the mother passes the infant backward and forward through the hole, singing in its ear: "Be a thief! Be a thief! Be a thief!" They are probably the only tribe in India who glorify peculation and raise it to the dignity of a regular calling.—Christian Herald.

Happier Days.

"My poor fellow, were you always a tramp?"
"No, mum. Onet I wuz known as a man about town."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Previous Question.

She—Papa asked what your intentions were last evening, George. He—Didn't say anything about his own, did he?—Boston Transcript.

If you get angry with a man or woman make up your mind what you are going to say and then don't say it.

The splendid work of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets is daily coming to light. No such grand remedy was ever known before. Thousands bless them for curing constipation, sick headache, biliousness, jaundice and indigestion. Sold by all good dealers.

PICKING HUSBANDS.

A Woman's Cynical View of the German Marriage Market.

The men in Germany do not marry. They are married. They are more or less passive articles of sale, which stand in rows in the matrimonial shop window with their price labeled in large letters in their buttonhole, waiting patiently for a purchaser. They are perfectly willing, even eager, victims. They want to be bought, but their position does not allow them to grasp the initiative, and they are thankful when at last some one comes along and declares herself capable and willing to pay the price.

The girl and her mother, with their purse in hand, pass the articles in review and choose out the one which best suits their means and fancy.

"I shall marry an officer," one girl told me some time ago with the easy confidence of a person about to order a new dress, and, lo and behold, before the year was out she was walking proudly on the arm of a dragoon lieutenant! I even knew of three women who swore to each other that they would marry only geniuses, and here also they had their will. One married a great painter, one a poet and another a famous diplomatist. That they were all three peculiarly unhappy is not a witness against the system, but a proof that geniuses may occasionally be very uncomfortable partners. In this case the purchasers were rich and popular and could therefore make their choice. Others of lesser means would have had to content themselves with an officer, cavalry or infantry, according to the "dot," or a lawyer, or a doctor, or a merchant, and so on down the scale.—Miss Wylie's "My German Year."

ODDLY EXPRESSED.

Queer Ways In Which Ideas Are Sometimes Put Into Words.

Curious ways of expressing ideas in English may be expected from foreigners, as, for instance, when the Frenchman, who made a call in the country and was about to be introduced to the family, said: "Ah, ze ladies! Zen I could before, if you please, wish to purify noble 'onds and to sweep nine hair."

A Scotch publican was complaining of his servant maid. He said that she could never be found when wanted. "She'll gang out o' the house," he said, "twenty times for once she'll come in."

A countryman went to a menagerie to examine the wild beasts. Several gentlemen expressed the opinion that the orang outang was a lower order of the human species. Hodge did not like this idea and, striding up to the gentleman, expressed his contempt for it in these words: "Pooh! 'Is no more of the human species than I be!" "Mamma, is that a spotted child?" asked a little boy on seeing a negro baby for the first time.

A sheep-eggrider a card warning everybody against unscrupulous persons "who infringe our title to deceive the public." The slogan does not quite say what he means any more than the proprietor of an eating house near the dock, on the door of which may be read the following announcement conveying fearful intelligence to the gallant tars who frequent this port: "Salub'rs' vittals cooked here."—Philadelphia North American.

Definition of True Humor.

The sense of humor is the "saving sense" principally because it saves us from ourselves. The person who cannot laugh at himself now and then is to be pitied. Moreover, the person who cannot take good naturedly the occasional bantering of others is in the same class of disagreeables. A well directed shaft of raillery will often find the vulnerable point in our armor of self complacency and show us where our self satisfaction is all wrong. True humor, however, must spring as much from the heart as from the head. Its essence must be truth and friendliness, not contempt. There never was a good joke yet that told a lie or besmirched a reputation. Humor which carries with it a sting to wound the sensitiveness or delicacy of one who does not deserve to suffer is not true humor.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Professional Instinct.

"Romeo and Juliet," with the original company, had reached its crucial moment.

Juliet was staggering about the stage, regarding her afflicted lover. "Oh, cruel poison!" she wailed. She raised her lover for a moment in her arms.

A wildly excited medical student in the gallery sprang to his feet. "Keep him up, Juliet—keep him up!" he bellowed. "I'll run out and fetch the stomach pump!"

A Run of Luck.

Violet—I never had such a streak of luck. He fell in love in Paris, proposed in Rome and bought the ring in Naples. Pierrot—Did your luck end there? Violet—Oh, no! While we were at Monte Carlo he won enough from papa for us to get married on.—London Illustrated Bits.

The Silver Lining.

In life troubles will come which look as if they would never pass away. The night and the storm look as if they would last forever, but the coming of the calm and the morning cannot be stayed.

The reward of one duty is the power to fulfill another.
